Want Success? Go Get It
New Store; Good News
If Bryan Were Harding
There Are Alligators

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921.

Courage, and plenty of it, the world needs now, with many men wondering whether they should go ahead or close up, lie down and die.

When men see, here and there, energetic spirits not only going ahead, but spreading out, it encourages all. Therefore you will learn with satisfaction that Benjamin Namm, a very young merchant in Brooklyn, has added twelve acres to his store—already big. This is the day when the new store opens, and it is pleasing confirmation of the theory that just after a war big success belongs to the man who has the courage to go out and get it.

Young Mr. Namm and other wise American business men know that war turns things upside down, shakes up the grab bag of fate and brings fine chances to the top. Nothing is really destroyed, but many are frightened, the tired out collapse, the right kind say: "This is my chance."

Everybody knows about the bigness of ancient things, the Roman catacombs, the pyramids where Egypt's kings were buried, the Colossus of Rhodes or the tomb of Mausolus. But few know much about the modern wonder, a great institution for distributing to the world, at retail, all that the world produces. Such a store as the one added by Mr. Namm to his original store is visited by as many as 100,000 people in a day. In its aisles you may walk eight miles without going twice over the same ground. It has an electric wiring system as great as that of a small town.

And editors and merchants please notice, there is no accident about such a success as that of the youthful Mr. Namm. Being young, he realizes the power of the latest improvements. Acting on the established maxim, "first HAVE what they want, then TELL them about it," Mr. Namm tells the people, and goes about his telling in the intelligent way. In the Hearst newspapers his advertising investment is twice as great as in all other New York and Brooklyn newspapers combined. Hence the new store and the size of it. Moral, to grow quickly, build quickly and reach the millions with what you have to say.

Either advertise your business or advertise it for sale, and if you do advertise, then ADVERTISE. Don't go at it like the man that cut half an inch off his little dog's tail every day because he was too kind-hearted to cut it all off at once.

William Jennings Bryan suggests things that he supposes Senator Harding will do. He thinks Mr. Harding will want Article Ten taken out of the League of Nations covenant, and will then be ready for "an association of nations in which the United States will do its part without surrendering its right to decide when it will go to war."

This writer supposes that Senator Harding will go nearer the roots of things than that. This guess is that another kind of peace, doing away with the treaty of Versailles entirely, will be asked for on the ground that the Versailles treaty was the product of excitement and intense hatred, unworthy of sane, civilized men.

That Apache treaty being torn up, according to this guess, the United States will view with friendly interest a plan to insure peace along the lines of The Hague conference.

Failing that, the United States will make a separate peace with Germany, about the middle of May, and go about its business, keeping ready for any trouble that may come. Mr. Bryan is asked to make a note of this guess.

The French are preparing to mobilize troops and occupy Southern Germany.

England, according to Frank Munsey's Herald, is politely suggesting that this country should look after payment to England of moneys due from Mexico and South American republics. Failing that, according to Mr. Munsey, England will demand that we "call off" the Monroe Doctrine. This country will not pay debts, however ingeniously piled up to the South, by England or anybody else. And the Monroe Doctrine will stay.

Russia—Frank Munsey is the authority once more—seeks to please Japan, for Japan is a menace to the United States, says Trotsky, and Russia, whose ambassador was kicked out of the United States in Bowery bouncer fashion, has hurt feelings and thinks this nation needs a lesson.

The feelings of the various nations toward us represent simply varying degrees of hatred. They all hate us, and they all respect just three things—men, battleships and billions. Billions especially just now.

The United States will NOT disarm.

Mr. Bryan would not disarm, if an alligator walked up to him at Miami. He would not say, "Pretty alligator, love Bryan." He would yell for another gun and fix the alligator. Mr. Bryan may not see them, but there are alligators around Uncle Sam, and another gun is what he needs.

MASKED BANDITS FOILED IN LAWRENCE

SHOT DOWN IN PAIRS BY FIRING SQUAD

Six Condemned Irish Patriots Are Put to Death by British Soldiers

By International News Service.

Dublin, Feb. 28.—Six condemned Sinn Feiners were executed by the British military authorities at Cork this morning.

The prisoners were executed in pairs. They were shot. The first pair met death at 8 o'clock, the second pair at 8:15 and the third pair at 8:30 o'clock.

The men met death bravely. They walked to the execution field and refused to be blindfolded.

Hundreds of persons waited outside the prison. Many knelt in prayer. Masses were said in all the Catholic churches.

The emotion displayed in the city

150 See Coolidges Start for Capital

Northampton, Feb. 28.—Accompanied only by his wife and Captain James J. Grady of the State Police, Calvin Coolidge boarded an ordinary day coach here today on the first leg of his journey to Washington, where he will be sworn in as Vice President of the United States.

The Coolidges before taking their train held a very informal reception on the little station platform, and listened to the homely, hearty, good wishes of about 150 of their fellow citizens who had come to see them off.

As the train pulled out there was some cheering and a good deal of neighborly "joshing." Somebody waved a small American flag. Pomp and ceremony were conspicuously absent.

In the day coach the future Vice President and the next "second lady of the land" rubbed elbows with farmers' wives a-shopping bent, and with lumberjacks. They received in good part the congratulations of the train hands.

At Springfield they changed to a

March Is Coming in "Like a Lamb"

March is coming in "like a lamb" this year, if the prediction of the Weather Bureau proves correct. The official forecast issued by Mr. Smith today was "fair and not much change in temperature tonight and tomorrow, with moderate variable winds, becoming westerly."

Today's rain was caused by a heavy storm off the New England coast, which drenched Boston with approximately half an inch of rain, and New York and Philadelphia with almost two inches.

The highest temperature in New England was at Nantucket, where the thermometer recorded 46, and the lowest was at Greenfield, where it dropped to 30.

Send Girl's Body 1,500 Miles for Burial

Lawrence, Feb. 28.—The body of four-months-old Maria Domingues, who died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Domingues, Merrimac street, will be shipped 1,500 miles to Havana for burial. The father, who is a mill operative here, owns a lot in a Cuban cemetery, and has made arrangements to have his daughter buried there.

A coffin containing the body of the infant will leave Boston Thursday on board a United Fruit Company liner, and will be received by relatives. The parents will not accompany it.

NORWOOD PHONE GIRL ACCUSES 2 IN COURT

Frederick J. Goebell of Dedham and Peter E. Curran of Norwood were in Dedham District Court today charged with an attempt to rob Miss Mary Hughes, Norwood telephone operator, early yesterday. The girl told the police they pursued her on her way home from work and tried to snatch her purse. They were held in $3,000 each for further hearing March 5.

VICTIMS FOUND IN WRECK DEBRIS

Engineer on Michigan Central Charged With Being Responsible for Rail Disaster

By International News Service.

Porter, Ind., Feb. 28.—Four more dead, found buried today under the monument of wreckage which marks the scene of the railway accident here, brought the total known killed to 38.

The four were found crushed under a litter of twisted steel near the huge New York Central engine and it is believed the locomotive, after tearing through the Michigan Central train, dragged the bodies with it.

It is believed that eight or ten more bodies remain buried in the wreckage.

The number of injured was placed this morning at 100.

The following statement was given out by the general superintendent of the New York Central lines:

JANITOR PREVENTS RAILWAY ROBBERY

3 Masked Bandits Foiled in Attempt to Rob Lawrence Office of Bay State

Lawrence, Feb. 28.—An attempt by three masked men to rob the main office of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company on Merrimac street, was frustrated today by the quick-wittedness of the janitor, Samuel James.

James, who with an assistant was cleaning up the office, spied the men through a window, and running to a telephone put in an emergency call for the police.

A squad of patrolmen was hurried to the office, but the would-be bandits had disappeared.

According to Manager John H. Hayes, there was a considerable sum of money and a quantity of tickets in the office safe.

Burglars were more successful in two other breaks in this city, one of which was revealed by a pet cat.

The cat, which is locked up each

MISS EDITH BABCOCK

Miss Edith Babcock of Parkman place, Dorchester, who served as a nurse overseas, and Captain Fred Gilson of the Lawrence Fire Department were quietly married at All Saints Episcopal Church, Dorchester, by the Rev. Simon Blunt. The marriage was a surprise even to their intimate friends.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Babcock of Parkman place. She went to Europe with the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital unit, being one of the first professional nurses to enlist. The couple will live in Lawrence after a short honeymoon.

The biggest budget in the history of Boston, totalling $33,011,084.72 for city and county expenses, with $1,400,000 slashed from department estimates by Mayor Peters, was sent to the city council today. It represents an increase of $579,052.80 in city expenses and $103,682.31 in county expenses over last year exclusive of debt requirements.

WRIT SOUGHT TO FREE HAYWOOD AND 78 OTHERS

Washington, Feb. 28.—Petition for a writ of certiorari today was filed in the United States Supreme Court in the case of William D. Haywood and seventy-eight other members of the Industrial Workers of the World, who were convicted after sensational trials in Chicago in 1918 on charges of conspiracy to violate the draft and espionage acts. The main contention is that the search warrants used by the Federal agents, who seized tons of documents in more than fifty simultaneous raids on September 5, 1917, were invalid.

FIRE ADDS TO THE HORROR OF FATAL TRAIN WRECK

and that the engine miraculously jumped back on the track again just as the New York Central train crashed into it. Officials from Chicago and New York routes are en-route here. It will be a joint investigation and a thorough one. It is impossible to place the blame now.

Calling a man guilty of such a thing means calling him guilty of murder."

The wreck occurred when a New York Central flyer crashed into the Canadian limited of the Michigan Central railroad. The Canadian limited left Chicago at 6 o'clock last night. The New York Central train was bound for Chicago from Boston. The crash occurred about 6:30 o'clock last night.

BLAMES ENGINEER.

Joseph Cook, tower man in the tower from which signals were given to control the fatal crossing, declared today that the New York Central train had the right of way and that the block was set to stop the Michigan Central flyer.

"Under normal conditions," he explained, "the blocks are set against all trains. The train hitting the buzzer first then is given the right of way. That is, the block which is set against them is released and the train is permitted to go on.

"That is exactly what happened when the buzzer sounded last night. It showed that the New York Central train was the first to hit the buzzer by almost a full minute ahead of the Michigan Central flyer.

"I released the block which permitted the New York Central train to go through. Just as the train hit the crossing I saw the Michigan Central train coming around the curve at sixty miles an hour.

"The Michigan Central train hit the derail, which clearly showed that the block had been set against it, and plowed over the ties and tracks, tearing them up as it went across the New York Central right of way. When the third coach of the Michigan Central train had passed over the New York Central right of way the New York Central train cut through it. Its locomotive toppled over and the coaches of both trains scattered in all directions.

"I feel that the Michigan Central engineer was asleep, for there are two blocks that were visible almost a mile and a half before he reached the crossing."

The following bodies of wreck victims at the Chesterton morgue have been identified:

Mr. and Mrs. McCray, Chicago.

Claude Johnson, Elkhart, Ind., engineer of the New York Central train.

George Deland, Elkhart, Ind., fireman of the New York Central train.

W. G. Engier, Detroit, accountant for the Michigan Central.

Mrs. Ralph See, Michigan City, Ind.

Pearl Cavanaugh, nine years old, Michigan City, Ind., niece of Mrs. See.

Miss June Campbell, Jackson, Mich., stenographer for the Michigan Central.

Gordon Campbell, Revelstoke, B. C.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Collins, London, Ont.

A. Matthews, Miskot, N. S.

Mrs. Barney Kramer, Michigan City.

Peter Cain, Regina, Sask.

T. J. Campbell, address unknown.

Mrs. Fred Schwier, Michigan City, wife of a Michigan Central brakeman.

——— Schwier, three-year-old son of Mrs. Schwier.

Mr. and Mrs. Addison Van Riper, Michigan City.

——— Wooler, Detroit.

C. A. Revier, Augusta, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Muller, Elkhart, Ind.

NOT IDENTIFIED.

Among the unidentified dead are:

A woman, twenty-seven, wearing a black dress; woman, twenty-four, with wedding ring; woman, twenty-three, with black hair; woman, twenty-five; woman, twenty-three; woman, fifty; man, fifty; man, forty; man, forty; and a badly mutilated man, apparently about thirty-five.

Among the missing are Mrs. George Bear, Michigan City, and Mrs. Fred Leggett, Michigan City.

The New York Central locomotive, after striking the other train, which is said to have been travelling at a sixty miles an hour clip, left the rails and toppled over. The fireman was scalded to death and the engineer died soon after being taken from the wrecked and burning cab of his engine.

A majority of the victims were residents of Michigan City.

Porter has no physician and but few residents. Those available went to the scene with axes, picks and shovels and started rescue work together with passengers, from the two trains who escaped injury.

CAME TO THE RESCUE.

Soon there began pouring in from the surrounding contryside scores of farmers and their wives and children. Two physicians came from Chesterton, a mile away.

While women tore up their skirts to make bandages for the injured and helped them to the homes of residents, where they were put to bed, the bodies were removed first to the town hall and then to undertaking rooms in Chesterton.

The bodies were placed on the floor, on table tops and in chairs, while six embalmers worked to prepare them for the inquest today. Some were so mutilated as to render identification almost impossible.

Four relief trains arrived here during the night from Chicago, Elkhart and Michigan City.

Father Deville, chaplain in the late war, crawled amid the smoking debris to administer the last sacraments to the dying. Nine-year-old Pearl Cavanaugh was dug from the wreckage. She held in her tiny bag a bag of candy. Another strange freak of the wreck was a woman, apparently in her thirties, who was found with her clothing torn completely from her body.

The work of rescue was begun by lantern light while the Porter volunteer fire department played feeble streams of water on the burning wreckage.

Trainmen, passengers and townspeople armed with axes and picks, climbed over the wreckage, chopping away timbers and dragging the injured out to safety. Between eighteen and twenty cars were strewn along the right of way, many at crazy angles, while two were reduced to kindling wood.

Later in the night two cranes and 200 laborers toiled in the blue glare of arc lights in an effort to bring order out of chaos.

The ground for a wide area and even the telegraph wires were covered with splinters and fine bits of glass, wood, and clothing torn from the victims.

The trucks were torn from the locomotive of the New York Central train and thrown high into the air. The front was crushed in.

SOME CARS SAVED.

One of the two Pullman sleepers of the Canadian Limited, bound for Toronto, carried fourteen passengers, and the other for Montreal carried eighteen. With the exception of bruises and slight cuts, none of the occupants was hurt. The two Canadian parlor cars, one bound for Detroit and the other for Grand Rapids, came off unscathed, the Grand Rapids car not even being derailed.

Mrs. Barney Kramer of Michigan City, killed in the wreck, was returning home on the Michigan Central train after a visit to her husband. Physicians today were afraid to notify Mr. Kramer of his wife's death as he is suffering from heart trouble.

Among the women on the New York Central train was Frances Kennedy, vaudeville star and wife of Thomas Johnson, Chicago attorney. She was only bruised and aided in the care of the injured. Jerome J. Crowley, also a Chicago attorney, was among the rescued uninjured.

The list of dead shows the names of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Van Riper of Michigan City. Mr. Van Riper had been an engineer on the Michigan Central for an even fifty years and drove his last engine two days ago, having been retired from active duty on pension. He and his wife had been to Chicago to celebrate the occasion.

Wish we could tell you the name of this store, but we promised not to mention names. It was one of the most original looking places we've ever visited.

The stock is bad looking—not the kind the Filene Basement usually sells, but the prices are so extraordinary we do not believe you will be disappointed.

The store was located near Central Square, Cambridge, and is well known in that vicinity. Can you guess the name?

It was a neighborhood store, full of personality and under live management—probably did a very profitable business.

All this stock will be grouped in one place in main basement (men's stock on balcony) for quick selection. Extra salespeople to help you. Come early. Doors open at 9 a. m. Hundreds of lots not advertised. The prices here are so extraordinary that you better take a look.

WESTFIELD DEALERS REDUCE COST OF ICE

Westfield, Feb. 28.—The retail price of ice has been decreased from 70 to 60 cents per hundred pounds. Over 2,000 tons have been harvested by the local ice companies. No reduction has been made in the wholesale price. It is planned to keep the 60-cent rate in effect through the Summer months. The Congamond and Berkshire companies supply consumers here with about 6,000 tons of ice each season.

details of the alleged interview at a session of the Federal Grand Jury tomorrow morning.

It was in this interview that Mr. McCarthy was quoted as saying that bribes in excess of $1,000,000 had been offered him to fail in his duty.

Coincident with this move, District Attorney Gallagher caused Deputy United States Marshal Charles A. Bancroft to leave a similar subpoena at Mr. McCarthy's Boston home.

At the same time subpoenas were sent to New York and Washington on the chance of finding the "dry" official in one of the two cities. He was in New York on Sunday.

District Attorney Gallagher today expressed a determination to "go through" with this fight to make McCarthy tell who tried to bribe him, and to deliver them up to justice.

RELIES ON PENAL CODE.

It was intimated that McCarthy might be forced to give the Grand Jury this information under Section 146 of the Penal Code, a section little used. That part applying to the present situation reads as follows:

"Whoever, having knowledge of acts of commission of the crime of murder or other felonies cognizable by the courts of the United States, conceals and does not as soon as may be make known the same to some one of the judges or other persons in civil or military authority under the United States government, shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than three years, or both."

Assistants to Mr. Gallagher declared that attempted bribery was a felony and that the law would apply to Agent McCarthy. They did not intimate that he would be prosecuted, but did say they thought he could be forced to give names of those he said tried to bribe him.

When Assistant District Attorney Shea was asktd what action would be taken if McCarthy failed to obey the subpoena, he answered, "That, I suppose, could be construed as contempt of court and dealt with by a United States judge."

District Attorney Gallagher declares he wants McCarthy to give the Grand Jury details and names which will enable the United States authorities here to run down the man, or men, alleged by McCarthy to be responsible for the attempt at bribery.

He intends to hold the Federal Grand Jury in session until it has obtained sufficient evidence to indict those guilty of attempting to corupt Federal agents.

It was asserted today that McCarthy and his men are on the trail of a bootlegging ring, with headquarters in New York, which has been attempting to push its operations into New England. Boston agents, it was said, have been engaged in running down evidence against this ring for more than a week. Agent Richard A. Kelly of this city has been in charge of the work.

In a statement Mr. Gallagher says: "I consider Mr. McCarthy's disclosures to be the most important and momentous revelation of lawlessness that has ever been brought to my attention as United States Attorney and I propose to bring the matter to the attention of the Grand Jury on Tuesday morning. If we can get evidence enough to warrant action, we will see that every briber and every fixer goes to the penitentiary no matter how big they are or who they are.

"The grand jury comes in on Tuesday, its original purpose being to clean up a few routine matters, but in view of these disclosures it will be asked to meet as long as may be necessary to take action against these people who have been trying to corrupt United States officials."

Mr. Gallagher announces that any person who has knowledge of any case of attempted bribery will be performing a public service if he calls it to the attention of the district attorney.

SIX SINN FEINERS EXECUTED BY BRITISH was said to have been unequalled since the 1916 rebellion.

Five of the condemned men had been convicted of taking part in an ambush of crown forces. The sixth had been convicted of a similar offence, committed at another time.

All of the executed men were about twenty years of age. As the firing squad poured in a volley a chaplain rushed forward, kneeling over the prostrate forms to administer extreme unction.

Two Sinn Feiners were wounded when a detachment of fifteen British policemen were ambushed near Mullingar today. There were fifty men in the attacking party. They fired upon the police from the roadside and the latter returned the fire, wounding two of the Republicans.

Three gigantic raids were made here during the morning by the British military and police forces. They were carried out in the Stephens College, the Mount Joy and O'Connell street districts.

ROADS HERE ASK MORE FOR CARRYING MAILS

Washington, Feb. 28.—The New England railroads today joined in a petition to the Interstate Commerce Commission, asking for a re-examination of the facts and circumstances relative to the transportation of United States mail upon their lines and the services performed in that territory since September 1, 1920. The railroads request the commission to fix reasonable and adequate rates of pay and to order such readjustment of compensation as the commission shall deem just. The carriers in their petition said that the present rates do not yield sufficient revenue to pay for the service rendered.

night in the Peters' leather and harness shop at No. 134 Broadway, appeared at the owner's residence a short distance away. Miss Helena Peters curious as to the manner in which the tabby had escaped, made an investigation, and found a rear window of the shop had been forced.

The stock had been thrown about, but it was impossible to determine what had been taken.

Patrolman William Dowe discovered that the local branch of the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company, off South Broadway, had been broken into and an unsuccessful attempt made to pry off a safe door with a crowbar. The burglars were apparently scared away, as nothing was taken except a few boxes of crackers.

HATS TO BE AUCTIONED FOR HOSPITAL DRIVE

Between $1,500 and $2,000 is expected to be realized for the Boston Children's Hospital and Convalescents' Home through the auction of two dozen millinery creations Wednesday night at the Spring fashion show and dinner at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, under the auspices of the Associated Millinery Industries of New England. The hats were donated by Boston milliners. General Clarence R. Edwards will open the auction with a brief address. The entire proceeds will go to the fund. Invitations to attend have been sent to Mayor and Mrs. Andrew J. Peters.

AMERICAN CASH NEEDED IN CHINA

S. K. Alfred Sze, New Chinese Minister to U. S., in Boston to Aid Famine Fund

S. K. Alfred Sze, the new Chinese Minister to the United States, arrived in Boston today from Washington and tonight will speak at the meeting in Symphony Hall in the interests of the Chinese Famine Fund.

Mr. Sze is not a stranger to Boston or to Bostonians. He first came to the United States as an attache at the Chinese Legation twenty-three years ago. Later he resigned and studied at Cornell and then spent several months in Boston, taking a special Summer course at Harvard.

Since the beginning of the war and until a few weeks ago he was Minister to England.

Mr. Sze is somewhat reluctant to speak on the present political conditions of China. As yet he has not presented his credentials to the President and, therefore, characteristic of the diplomatic corps of all countries, does not want to express opinions that might embarrass himself of the members of either government.

Aside from the need of the hour in China—the need for immediate help to save the lives of millions in danger of starving in the five northern provinces—the country is dependent to the outer world for financial help and encouragement in the extension of trade, he said.

"China is undergoing its transition from an absolute monarchy to a republic," he said, "a period which is always accompanied by more or less unrest. Just how long this transition period will last depends greatly on what assistance we get from outside.

"Education and the utilization of our resources will do much to bring about a closer understanding of our people. We want capitalists and experts to go to China, to realize the extent of our resources and to help by capitalization, not us alone, but themselves.

"Much of our recent success we owe to America and to American educated Chinese students. When I first came here there was but six or seven of us studying in American colleges and universities. Today there are 1,800, and we hope this number will be greatly increased.

"Every year between 300 and 400 students return and are given positions of trust and eminence in our business, professional and diplomatic life."

AN EDITORIAL ON ADVERTISING

WHAT would make the greatest impression on a man who had been shut away from human beings and denied the use of newspapers for twenty years—what would most forcibly attract his attention—on regaining the society of his fellow men?

"Well," you say, "he is fairly certain to be interested in learning what sort of Government we have down in Washington."

True, and probably he will show mild excitement if you can tell him there's been a big war in Europe.

But it won't be until you get down to a recital of things that come closer to him personally that you'll bring him to his feet with eager questioning.

Tell him a mighty empire has fallen, and—so long as it isn't HIS empire—a drop curtain of highly embroidered indifference will mask his face.

But tell him the automobile has been so simplified that he can now buy one for the price of a horse and buggy and he'll probably bombard you with questions.

A revolution in China may be a world event, but it wouldn't mean as much to him as the perfecting of a shaving apparatus that would do away with the necessity of purchasing new blades or honing old ones.

If YOU had been a hermit for the past twenty years the news of a big flood wouldn't really mean so much to you as the information that you can now hear any famous opera singer in your own home at a cost of a few cents per hour.

Which is only another way of saying that the phonograph is of more PERSONAL interest than a flood.

You see how it is: Newspapers carry a "news of merchandise" that is just as interesting, just as vital, as the "news of events" which the editors gather for us.

And since this "news of merchandise" finds its only expression in the form of Advertising, we must admit that the Advertising columns are quite worthy of our serious attention as the largest news heading or the most ponderous editorial.

SHUT YOUR EYES TO ADVERTISING—AND YOU SHUT OUT THE NEWS OF COMMERCIAL PROGRESS AND DEVELOPMENT—THE NEWS OF THINGS THAT MAKE LIFE WORTH LIVING.

Advertising has changed the face of the map. Advertising has revolutionized the methods of doing business. Advertising has magnified the possibilities of business far beyond anything our most optimistic forefathers ever dreamed of.

Advertising has brought to the humblest home comforts and conveniences that were unknown to kings in former generations.

Advertising has raised the standard of living, simplified the manner of living, reduced the cost and time and trouble of supplying our daily needs.

Advertising has made a new world. It has been the greatest civilizing force in the world's history.

Advertising brings the world's markets to your home and tells you where your needs can be best supplied.

Every day that you fail to read advertising you miss something that will contribute more comfort and pleasure to life. Just now the advertising columns are filled with suggestions for the wise buying of necessities and luxuries—seasonable things of all kinds that it would be advantageous to have. Read the advertising and learn how economically you can possess them.

COOLIDGE GLAD TO ESCAPE WORRY

parlor car for New Haven, where they again transferred to the Colonial Express, which will land them in Washington tonight.

BOYS STAY HOME.

Neither of the Coolidge sons and heirs were at the station. Calvin, Jr., was in bed with a cold. John was up to have breakfast with his parents, but remained behind with his brother.

Mayor Fitzgerald and W. W. Darby of the City Council headed the city government delegates which came to see the Coolidges away. F. A. Farrar headed a delegation of business men.

Prominent in the little gathering on the depot platform were thirty or forty women, friends and neighbors of Mrs. Coolidge, and members of the Edwards Church which she has long attended.

Mrs. Coolidge wore a blue suit, with a topcoat of greenish hue, and gray collar, and a small blue hat. As usual, she showed a great deal of animation and high spirits.

Her husband's rare smile appeared at unusually frequent intervals as he heard the blunt congratulations or warnings of his fellow-townsmen, of all races, religions and political affiliations.

As the vice-presidential party transferred at Springfield a few persons recognized its members, but there was no demonstration.

Calvin Coolidge, to a Boston American reporter, who remarked on his fine physical condition, admitted that he never felt better. He attributed it largely to the relief from the demands of State office which he has enjoyed during the past two months.

"It is not so much the duties connected with the office of Governor that try that official," he said, "as the many side issues that are constantly before him. He is continually being asked to prepare papers, make speeches or dispose of some political problem—all of which consume his time and strength.

"I am glad to have been Governor but it is an office that the people ought to look upon with a great deal of sympathy.

"I now feel that I am escaping from many of these worries. While the office of Vice-President is one of great importance, it doesn't entail so many details as the governorship of Massachusetts."

And one gathers from talking with the Vice-President-to-be that this may account for his enthusiasm and fine spirits. He is going into a bigger and broader field.

SONS TO SEE INAUGURATION.

The two Coolidge boys will attend the inauguration, but they will not leave Northampton until Thursday when they will go to Washington under the chaperonage of their grandfather, Colonel John C. Coolidge. Calvin, Jr., twelve years old, is eager to witness the inauguration ceremonies, but John, fourteen, is not very keen about it.

"He is afraid he will have to sit still too long," his distinguished father explained.

The boys will return to Northampton next Sunday or Monday and resume their studies in the public schools. While their parents are in Washington they will be under the charge of the family housekeeper, Mrs. Alice Reckahn.

"I am coming back to Northampton as often as I can," said Vice-President-elect Coolidge. "I expect to be back in a few weeks for a short visit."

Temporarily the Coolidges will live in the Willard Hotel in Washington, although they plan to take a house later. Failure to do so at this time, they say, was due to inability to find one that would conform to both their needs and purse.

If James Lucey, cobbler of Northampton, is not the original Coolidge man, he is certainly one of the first. Today he is swelling with pride over his prediction made when Coolidge was first elected mayor of Northampton that the young mayor would eventually advance to the highest office in the land. He declares that that is only a matter of a few years.

"The Vice-President invited me to come down to Washington to see him," Mr. Lucey told the representative of the Boston American, "but I told him I was going to wait until he was on the 'top perch.'"

INSPECTS SHOE STOCK.

"Most of we Irish are Democrats," Lucey remarked, "but the Vice-President is democratic enough for anyone.

"Only last week, he came into my shop to bid me good-bye. I was working at my stitching machine at the time and did not look up when the door opened. When I did, there was a man with piercing eyes looking at me. I later discovered that he was a secret service agent. Looking around I found the Vice-President looking over my stock.

"Yes a fine man he is. And generous, too."

COOLIDGE'S MESSAGE TO CITIZENS OF MASSACHUSETTS

CALVIN COOLIDGE

This is the message of Former Governor Calvin Coolidge to the citizens of Massachusetts, given through the Boston American upon his departure for Washington to take up his duties as Vice-President of the United States:

There are other people like the people of Massachusetts but I have found none better. I am not leaving them. I am taking them with me. They have made me and sent me. Them I still serve, but now there are added the rest of the American people. In serving them all I serve Massachusetts best. In that service I trust fully in home support.

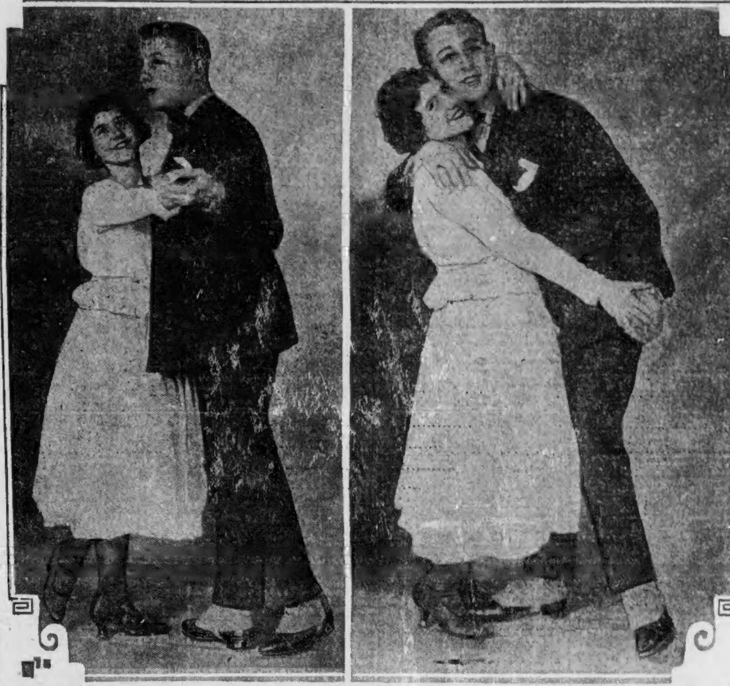
Woman Says Proper 'Camel Walk' Is Chaste and Smar



The Camel Walk, as danced by Miss Mabelle A. Patten and Horace S. Banister, at left, is a lilting thing of beauty, according to Mrs. Lilla Viles Wyman, for many years a teacher of classical dancing in Boston. Danced in this manner it is harmless and should be encouraged, she declares. Miss Patten and Mr. Banister, in the photograph on the right, illustrate the wrong way to dance the Camel Walk. The cheek to cheek, frantic grip and strangle hold of the wrong way should be discouraged, Mrs. Wyman declares.

The Camel Walk, scorned, vilified, rejected of man, has at last found a sponsor, and that—in Boston.

Not a sponser in the haunts of the dance commercialized; not a sponser among silly undergraduates and sub debs who dance the Camel Walk, whether or no.

Decidedly not. But where the classic dance is idealized; where the grace of the Grecian choriambics go hand in hand with the chaste dignity of the old Boston dance. In the times of Puritan Rome, has a sponser arisen for the execrated, hated, frowned upon, Camel Walk.

And this sponsor is none other than Mrs. Lilla Viles Wyman, for many, many years teacher of classic dancing in Boston. Now Mrs. Wyman's defence of the Camel Walk is more noteworthy, because Mrs. Wyman cares less and specializes hardly at all, in such steps as the Camel Walk. She merely brings her tolerance to bear upon them.

SAYS DANCE IS HARMLESS.

"The Camel Walk," she said today, "is nothing more than a harmless, lilting walk, set to music, with the funny up and down drop of the legs of each of the partners, to resemble the lilt of the camel. It is, properly, one of the simplest of graceful dances. It is very much like one of the steps of the tango.

"Now just let me explain one or two points, emphatically. The Camel Walk, danced right, is fit for the parlors of the most fastidious. The Camel Walk, danced wrong, is a decided offence against art and good taste and decency. Yet for mothers to forbid the Camel Walk, would be, in my estimation, the veriest unwisdom.

"Young people adore forbidden fruit. Therefore, don't make the 'Camel Walk' a fruit forbidden. Instead, have the young people dance it right; and have legitimate, self-respecting dancing teachers, teach it right. Now just another word on this question.

"We hear a great deal, in some quarters, of objectionable dancing in public halls but, for my part, I think there is far more rigid decorum in public dance places than in many places where we might expect better. For, when a policeman is apt at any minute to touch you on the arm and say, 'no more of that,' it is human nature to dance with circumspection.

"Which suggests the reverse side of the picture. I have a friend who was master of ceremonies at a most exclusive resort in the Adirondacks. He was under orders from the management to tolerate no cheek to cheek dancing. As he told me, he degenerated into a nagging policeman and he found that the only way with some, was to deprive them of their ticket to the club. They just would dance as they shouldn't.

BARS CHEEK TO CHEEK.

"With the Camel Walk, as with other dances, position is everything. Legitimate dancing teachers have worked over hours trying to get rid of the cheek to cheek, frantic grip, throttling strangle hold which prevails in many dances other than the Camel Walk. They don't belong in any dance. They are practiced in many dances, by the tasteless, the thoughtless, the heedless.

"The way a young man or woman dances, is one index to his and her taste and judgment. Keep the Camel Walk, I say. Teach it, encourage it, along with the other dances. But show the young people how it is most beautiful, danced right; and most ugly, danced in the gripping, throttling, unlovely way in which we see it danced, too often."

NURSE IS HELD IN ALLEGED POISON PLOT

Arrested on Return From Florida After Wealthy Cousin Is Strangely Ill

New York, Feb. 28.—Mrs. Alice T. Lattimer, a trained nurse of Syracuse, was arrested here from the Arapahoe, arriving from Florida, reached her dock and was held in connection with the strange case of Mrs. Ruth Crawford, a wealthy Syracuse widow, whose illness, according to the police, is surrounded with several mysterious elements.

Mrs. Lattimer was taken to Syracuse immediately by a detective from that city.

Mrs. Crawford, it is reported, has been bedridden for two years under the care of Miss Lattimer, being strapped to her bed for many months while relatives and friends have been denied admittance to her home.

Late in December it is declared, Mrs. Lattimer left for Florida after arranging with an undertaker to bury Mrs. Crawford, who, she said, would certainly die during her absence. A minister, denied admittance to the house, called the case to the attention of the police and the finding of chloral hydrate in a bottle of white liquid which Mrs. Lattimer had ordered her substitute to administer to the sick woman caused the police to order the nurse's arrest as soon as she reached New York.

Mrs. Crawford is sixty-eight years old. The Syracuse police say she was being slowly poisoned through the administration of a powerful soporific given in small doses under the guise of medicine.

One week before Mrs. Lattimer left Syracuse she paid a visit to Undertaker W. A. Drinkwine, predicting the death of her patient within a week. She purchased a casket.

"Why don't you stay until after the funeral?" the undertaker asked.

"Oh, I am too nervous," she is said to have replied. "I have become a nervous wreck. I must get away quickly or my own health will give way." She then arranged every detail of the aged woman's interment.

Mrs. Crawford and Mrs. Lattimer are cousins. The Onondaga County clerk's records show that about a year after Mrs. Crawford took to her bed there was filed a transfer of her property to Mrs. Lattimer. Mrs. Crawford's husband died about four years ago.

Makes $81 Clear on Pig Raised on "Nothing"

Here you have it!

A refined way of making easy money!

Raise pigs for the market!

Anyone can do it with a little practice, according to J. B. Palmer of Lisbon, Ct.

Mr. Palmer has just sold a year-and-a-half-old pig which weighed 510 pounds, for which he received $81.60, or 16 cents a pound. The pig was allowed to run free foraging for itself, and also received the family garbage. The cost of raising was practically nil. Mr. Palmer butchered the animal himself, although not as young as he was, having just celebrated his golden wedding anniversary. Labor, therefore, practically nothing. Result, $81 clear profit. So he says, at least.

Time to File State Incomes Near End

Fellow taxpayer, tempus is fugiting right along. Only today and tomorrow remain for the filing of State income tax returns at No. 40 Court street.

The office closes at 5 p. m. tomorrow, which is the last hour at which you make your returns in person. However, if you use the mails, anything with a March 1 postmark will be held within the law. You do not have to pay any part of the tax immediately.

Remember, if you are single, and have an income of above 1,000, you must file a return, whether you have to pay a tax or not. The reportable amount if you are married is $2,000.

Time for filing Federal income tax returns expires at midnight, March 15. At least one-quarter of the tax must be paid by that date.

4000 HELD UP BY QUARANTINE OFFICIALS

Immigrants Arriving on Liner Cretic and Princess Matoika to be Examined for Typhus

A flood of more than four thousand immigrants burst upon quarantine officials of Boston Harbor today, when the United States Mail Steamship Company's liner Princess Matoika and the White Star liner Celtic both from Genoa, Naples and Punta Del Garda, reached port.

Each steamer carried more than 12,000 passengers and a clean bill of health, but quarantine officials of Boston are not paying much attention to mere paper declarations of conditions nowadays, and are taking every possible precaution against the dreaded typhus.

The Matoika was the first to arrive, the Cretic coming shortly after 8 o'clock. She was forced to wait her turn with the health officials.

Fog and rain forced both craft to creep slowly up the harbor. They were to dock at the Commonwealth Pier late in the day.

The 400 passengers on board the Baltic American liner Lithuania, which arrived from Libau and Danzig yesterday, added to the work of the quarantine officers.

Most of the Lithuania's passengers and crew were examined yesterday and found "not free from typhus-carrying vermin," according to the official report on her case.

Just what will be done with her and with those aboard has not been decided as yet, but if the quarantine authorities are disposed to push the case they probably will delouse all the passengers and the crew, hold them in quarantine for twelve days and fumigate the ship before allowing her to proceed.

HARDING ON WAY NORTH WORKS ON MESSAGE

To Be Among His Neighbors Tuesday; Goes to Capital Thursday

By International News Service.

En route with President-elect Harding, Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 28.—President-elect Harding worked on his inaugural address today while his special train sped northward on the first leg of its journey to Washington.

Senator Harding planned to put in some hours of uninterrupted work on his message.

Marion neighbors have arranged to give the President-elect an enthusiastic send-off.

Cincinnati will be reached tonight and Marion early Tuesday morning.

The President-elect will have two days in his home town before proceeding on to Washington to be inaugurated on Friday. The Senator and Mrs. Harding will stay at the home of his father, Dr. George T. Harding, during their last visit to Marion.

The President-elect and Mrs. Harding will leave Marion Wednesday night, arriving in the capital Thursday afternoon. They will go direct to the presidential suite at the Willard.

Indications are that the Harding inauguration on Friday will be one of the shortest on record. Those around the President-elect said today that nothing elaborate in the way of a speech was planned.

No further announcements on the Cabinet are expected from Mr. Harding until he presents the names to the Senate for confirmation on March 4. The only post about which any uncertainty is still felt is that of labor.

Indications are that the place will go to James J. Davis, head of the Order of Moose.

SCHOOL TEACHERS WILL HEAR LECTURE ON ERIN

Alice D. Burke

Dr. James J. Walsh, noted educator and lecturer, will speak in Abraham Lincoln School on Arlington street tonight on the subject "What Civilization Owes to Ireland." The meeting will be under the auspices of Charles Carroll of Carrollton Council, A. A. R. I. R., and will mark the opening of a drive for funds for Irish relief.

Dr. Walsh has lectured here in forums in the Old South Meetinghouse, Ford Hall, the Young Men's Hebrew Association and the Men's City Club.

Miss Margaret M. C. McAndrew will sing two groups of Irish songs. Miss Emily A. Brady will be pianist. The ushers will be Misses Alice D. Burke, Emily A. Brady, Ruth M. Drury, Grace V. Lynch, Frances Donovan, Lauretta McCourt and Ursula Mee. The council is composed exclusively of public school teachers.

WOMAN IN 15-YEAR SEARCH FOR FATHER

New York, Feb. 28.—A fifteen-year search for her father through every State in New England has brought Mrs. Amos Benedict Filer of Providence, R. I., to this city.

Her search started in 1905 after her marriage, said Mrs. Filer in Providence, she declared, she found her birth record in full which gave her father's name as Sutherburg and the maiden name of her mother as Mary Louise Smith of Worcester. The mother died at her birth, said Mrs. Filer. Through her informant, she asserted, she had located a sister, Mrs. Walter Fox, living in Brooklyn.

SACCO AND ZANZETTI TRIAL IS DELAYED

Chief Justice Aiken, sitting in the Superior Court at Dedham today, granted petition of counsel for Nichola Sacco and Bartolomeo Zanzetti, charged with murder, for a stay of sixty days in the trial, which was set for March 7, in order to allow time in which to obtain the depositions of two witnesses in Italy. Sacco and Zanzetti are accused of the murder of Alexander Berardelli and with intent to murder Frederick J. Parmenter at Braintree, April 15, last. Zanzetti is now serving a fifteen-year sentence at the Charlestown Prison, and Sacco is under arrest without bail in the Norfolk County Jail.

CLUBS WOMAN WITH GAS PIPE; SHOOTS HIMSELF

Believing that the love of the woman with whom he was infatuated had turned cold, William H. Reissmann, thirty-four years old, beat Mrs. Sadie Russell over the head with a piece of gaspipe and then shot himself twice in the head in the apartment house, No. 621 Western avenue, Lynn, where Reissmann is expected to die and Mrs. Russell will recover, attendants say.

The police found a letter in Reissmann's pockets professing his love for Mrs. Russell and charging that she had failed to keep her promise to marry him. Both are already married.

PANAMA SENDS VOLUNTEERS TO WAR FRONT

Report Hostilities Are Begun Against Costa Rica Is Unconfirmed

Balboa, Panama Canal Zone, Feb. 28.—Although Panama has no regular army, she is continuing to send volunteers into the field and otherwise prepare for war against Costa Rica as a result of the quarrel over territory in the Chiriqui district on the Pacific Coast.

A report that hostilities already had opened near Golfo Dulce is not officially confirmed by the Panama government. Word was expected from the commander of the volunteers in that district this afternoon.

Other volunteers will reach the village of Coto in the disputed neighborhood during the day.

No reply has yet come from Washington to the request for return of rifles given up to the United States by the Panama government.

No reply has yet been received to the communication addressed by Panama to Costa Rica on Saturday, demanding an explanation of the movement of Costa Rican troops across the border.

GOMPERS SPEAKS AT HARVARD ON MARCH 10

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, will speak at the Harvard Union Thursday, March 10—He will appear under the auspices of the Student Liberal Club. It was first planned to have Elbert H. DEATH TOLL ON U. S. DESTROYER SET AT 16

112 Rescued From Woolsey, Sunk in Crash Off Panama With Merchantman

Balboa, Panama Canal Zone, Feb. 28.—the number of dead in the sinking of the United States destroyer Woolsey off the Panama coast was put at sixteen today by the American Canal Zone authorities.

About 112 members of the crew were rescued. The Woolsey was sunk in collision with the merchant ship Steel Inventor near the island of Coiba, off Panama, on Saturday.

The Woolsey was practically cut in two and the after part of the vessel immediately flooded. The destroyer Aaron Ward started to tow the ill-fated vessel to Panama, but she could be kept afloat for only two hours.

All of the known 112 survivors were taken aboard the Aaron Ward. The Woolsey was commanded by Commander H. O. Gearing, Jr. The missing destroyer men were:

D. T. Blakely, fireman, first class; Floyd Coltengin, fireman, second class; Roman Fleckles, blacksmith; John Joseph Gaicher, machinists' mate, first class; George Joseph Elhello, fireman, second class; Elbert Jesse Harson, fireman, first class; Henry George Hancock, engineman, second class; Emerson Floyd Long, storekeeper, first class; Leo Norwardsky, fireman, third class; Harold Reed, fireman; Mattice Owen Stewart, fireman, third class; Webb Stubblefield, fireman, first class; George Elmar Wachtman, electrician, third class; Charles N. Yost, fireman, first class; Emerson Dale Waight, fireman, second class. Following injured are on Birmingham: D. M. McCaldo, watertender, and Attorbio Burnside.

MERCHANT SHIP UNHURT.

The merchant vessel escaped with only slight damage, and suffered no casualties. She proceeded under her own power, to Balboa, convoyed by the destroyer Buchanan.

The Woolsey was built by the Bath, Me., Iron Works and was put into full commission on [illegible]. She cost $925,200. Her displacement was 1,150 tons, length over all 314 feet and beam 30 feet 11¼ inches. Her speed was 35 knots.

The Woolsey carried a battery of four four-inch guns, in addition to two one-pounders and several automatic rifles. She was equipped with four 21-inch torpedo tubes.

TELLS OF HEROISM.

Admiral Rodman told of thrilling deeds of rescue performed by the navy lads. He stated that the traditions of the American navy were upheld to the letter. The destroyer sank with every Jack Tar standing muster at his post.

A low, thick fog hung over the Bay of Panama when the disaster occurred.

One sailor killed was on duty on deck and was caught in the wreckage. The rest of the crew were at mess. Commander H. O. Gearing, Jr., in command of the Woolsey, immediately ordered the crew to their posts.

Every man alive aboard the destroyer took his position assigned for battle.

The destroyer Philip reached the sinking vessel as she was going under. The survivors of the Woolsey did not leave their craft until the last moment.

PRINCESS IN FRAUD SUIT PLEADS "MISTAKE"

New York, Feb. 28.—Princess Melanie De Bertrand De Lytull Engalitchaff, wife of a Russian Prince, who is being sued for fraud by a Paris jeweler, insist that it is all a "dreadful mistake." She is charged with buying and only partly paying for two valuable rings. The jeweler says she told him she was to inherit $200,000 and on the strength of that wealth he extended credit. "It is distressing," says the Princess. The couple are at the Waldorf-Astoria.

WRITE TITLES FOR THESE PICTURES; $5,000 IN AWARDS!

NEW MOVIE TEST BEGINS; ALL NEW ENGLAND WELCOME

On this page readers of the Boston American will find Pictures No. 1 and No. 2 in our Movie Play Title Test.

On this page, also, will be found a List of Motion Picture Play Titles.

In this List of Motion Picture Play Titles will be found the titles of today's two Test Pictures.

And there you have the entire "method" of the new Test!

The Boston American, in association with the Boston Sunday Advertiser, offers $5,000 to the readers who send in the largest numbers of correct titles—and the correct titles will be before you!

The Movie Play Title Test will consist of 60 pictures, in manner similar to today's. There will be ONE Test Picture every day, for 60 consecutive days. On week days, the Test Picture will be printed in the Boston American; on Sundays, in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Nothing is to be sent in until the end of the Test. Then the score will be made up and the $5,000 will be awarded as follows:

ONE SECOND AWARD	750
ONE THIRD AWARD	500
ONE FOURTH AWARD	400
ONE FIFTH AWARD	300
ONE SIXTH AWARD	200
ONE SEVENTH AWARD	150
ONE EIGHTH AWARD	100
ONE NINTH AWARD	50
100 AWARDS OF $10 EACH	1,000
110 AWARDS OF $5 EACH	550
TOTAL	$5,000

The First Award will be paid to the participant who, at the end of the Test, sends in the largest percentage of correct titles. He may have 60 correct titles, or 59, or 58—or, conceivably, only 45 or 50—but if his is the largest number of correct titles his will be the $1,000 award.

The Title Test should be the most enjoyable thing of the kind ever conducted by New England newspapers for the entertainment and profit of their readers. ALL that you are asked to do is to write the correct titles for the Test Pictures.

Study, now, today's pictures. Turn from them to the List of Titles. Find the right title for each picture. It should not be difficult. One title in the list fits each of these pictures to a "t"; fits it better than any other title in the list.

The Test began in yesterday's Boston Sunday Advertiser, with the printing of Test Picture No. 1. We reprint No. 1 today, because—telephone and telegraph have advised us—hundreds of our friends remained in bed yesterday so late that when they bethought themselves of the Title Test the newsdealers already had begun to say: "Boston Sunday Advertiser? I was all sold out of Boston Sunday Adevrtisers an hour ago."

It is our desire to give every friend of the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser an opportunity to come into the new $5,000 Test at the very beginning. Here you have Pictures No. 1 and No. 2. The third Test Picture will be printed tomorrow.

Each and every Test Picture will represent the title of a motion picture which has been produced in the United States. Many of them will be current attractions, on view in New England at the time the Test Pictures based upon them is printed in these papers.

There will be no "make-believe" titles; no "catch" titles; no imaginary motion picture plays. There will be no necessity for the use of masks or other "decorations." Every picture will be drawn along lines similar to today's. The youngest of our readers will find the Test as easy as the oldest.

Two hundred of the leading motion picture theatres of New England will co-operate in the Test by flashing the daily Test Pictures on their screens. We print a list of these theatres and respectfully suggest that, at least while the Test continues, you patronize one of them. They are not to show the Test Pictures merely at the beginning of the Test, or part of the way through, but DAILY THROUGHOUT THE TEST.

There is no reason why moving picture theatre folk—managers, operators, musicians, ushers, everybody—should not take part in the Title Test if they so desire. The Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser not only invite them to do so but will welcome their participation.

The Title Test, then, is wide open to everybody in New England with the exception of employes of the co-operating newspapers and the members of their families. Having decided to enter, please begin by reading the Rules. They were written with the idea and in the hope that they would answer every question. If, however, there is something about the Test that is not entirely clear to you, write a letter to Movie Title Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., and look for your answer in the Boston American.

All Film Player Answers Carefully Checked

The director of Movie Player Test Headquarters, whose staff of helpers was increased today by twenty, asks for space enough to "report progress."

"The forty thousand readers who sent us parcels of Player Identifications," says Mr. Director, "may be glad to know that we have completed the first sorting of our mail and are now going over it a second time.

"First of all, it was made ready by States, and in the different New England States by localities, alphabetically.

"When this was done we began with the State of Massachusetts, to list the individuals alphabetically. We had gone down through the letter 'E'—in the Massachusetts mail alone—when work was resumed this morning.

NEAT PACKAGES RECEIVED.

"Early last week the thing which impressed everybody at headquarters the most was the size of the mail. The Movie Test Editor had been telling everybody that at least 30,000 parcels would come in. We thought he was raving. When bag followed bag from the postoffice, until more than 40,000 pieces of mail had been dumped upon us, we began to realize that the old boy 'knew something.'

"When one of the clerks opened this Springfield parcel it was made clear to many of us, perhaps for the first time, how thoroughly many readers of the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser had made the Player Test a part of their lives for sixty days.

CLIPPED TITLES DAILY.

"The Springfield woman's Player Test Identifications make up not merely a parcel, but a book, and a particularly handsome book! The owner has sent in 120 of the larger pictures, clipped from the daily and the Sunday paper in regular order. Apparently the reprints did not interest her. She took no chances, but clipped the pictures daily.

"Then, she arranged them, ten pictures to the page on twelve big pages. She used a high grade of paper and enclosed the lot in leather binding. We have not yet checked up her 'identifications'—or anybody else's for that matter—but we are all agreed that if neatness, order and the attractiveness of the exhibit were exclusively the things that count the First Award of $1,000 might be headed towards Springfield."

The attention of the Headquarters Director was called to an anonymous letter, the writer of which declares that he has been told that "of course" no effort will be made to go over the entire lot of 40,000 parcels.

THERE IS NO "USUAL WAY."

"I am told," says Mr. Anonymous, "that the thing will be decided in the usual way of newspaper contests; that is, that you will select a lot of answers and decide the Test by them."

"In the first place," answered the Test Director, "I decline to agree that there is any such 'usual way' in newspaper contests.

"In the next place, if 'Old Subscriber,' or 'Pro Bono Publico,' or whoever this bird is, would stop to reflect for one minute he would see the impossibility of deciding this particular Test in any such way.

"We have got to print the 120 CORRECT identifications, haven't we? And every one of the 40,000 readers who trusted us, will know from that list—will he not?—whether HIS number of CORRECT identifications was as large or larger than somebody whom we list for one of the awards. What folly it would be to attempt to deceive people in any such silly way!

ALL CAREFULLY CHECKED.

"Every parcel at headquarters will be gone over and checked up as carefully as if it were the only parcel that came to us. That is why the work is likely to take five weeks. If Mr. Anonymous were the only person concerned I would advise you not to answer him, but perhaps everybody on the list will be glad to know something of our method and the enormity of our task."

The best motion picture theatres in New England will flash the Title Test Picture on the screen at every performance from the beginning of the Test until its end.

If YOUR favorite motion picture theatre is not listed here, on or before Wednesday, speak to Mr. Manager about it. Every house-manager in New England who aims to be of service to his patrons should be listed here before the end of the week.

Theatres on this list are theatres the managers of which aim to be of Service. In this instance they will give their patrons something extra—something more than the price of admission calls for—by permitting them to see, in helpful, enlarged form pictures which may mean a large amount of money to one or more of them.

It is the testimony of motion picture promoters that the Movie Player Identity Test revivied, or sustained popular interest in the pictures at a time of the theatrical year generally looked upon as dull. The TITLE Test will be similarly helpful.

Forty thousand parcels of Movie Player Identifications, submitted at the close of the recent Test, is incontrovertible testimony that the readers of the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser are lovers and patrons of motion picture theatres. We respectfully urge them to favor those picture houses which, in turn, favor them by their co-operation.

Today's List of Theatres is not, and must not be looked upon as, complete. Additions will be made from hour to hour and from day to day throughout the present week. The Boston American is proud to have the co-operation of these representative houses and their up-to-date managers and cheerfully recommends them to its readers.

In another column we have called attention to the fact that the men and women of the picture theatres are eligible to take part in the new Test and are invited to come in. In the Player Test, it was felt that they might have an advantage over other participants. It is perfectly clear that no such advantage will be theirs in the Title Test.

The only persons barred from taking part in the Title Test are employes of the Boston American and employes of the Boston Sunday Advertiser, together with members of their families.

Rules of the Movie Play Title Test

The Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser's new Movie Play Title Test is a test of skill and judgment open to all readers of the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, irrespective of age, living in any city or town in New England or Canada.

Two hundred and nineteen cash awards will be given by these two newspapers to their readers who submit the largest percentage of correct titles to the 60 pictures to be published one each day consecutively in the Daily American and Sunday Advertiser.

All employes of the Boston American, the Boston Sunday Advertiser, and their families are absolutely barred from participating in the awards.

The test will consist of 60 pictures, representing the title of a Moving Picture Play, to be printed one each day in the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser, first picture, Sunday, February 27, 1921.

Participation in any other contest which has been run, which is now running or which may be run by the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser will not debar anyone from entering this test.

Every participant or any or all members of a family will be allowed to submit one set of pictures, but each must contain only ONE TITLE to each picture, and no participant shall be entitled to more than one award and not more than one award shall be given in any one family.

Each and every title must be neatly written or printed on the coupon furnished by the Boston American or Boston Sunday Advertiser, or a pen or pencil copy thereof, and must have the name, residence, etc., of the participant on each title blank.

Do not send your titles in "list" form, i. e., do not write titles under one another on a piece of paper

In case there are no complete sets of correct titles, awards will be given to the person submitting the nearest correct solutions, giving weight to skill and judgment

In case of a tie, awards will be made on the basis of neatness, judgment and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied participants will receive similar awards.

Under no circumstances should participants send in their titles before the end of the test, as any sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered. KEEP your titles from day to day and at the end of the test arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all together at one time

Time will not be a factor in making the awards. The first titles sent in after the test closes will stand no better than the last submitted.

All titles must be delivered to the Boston American Movie Play Title Headquarters at No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., either by mail or in person within the specified time limit which will be announced later.

All envelopes or packages containing titles must be legibly addressed as follows: "Movie Play Title Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass., P. O. Box 239," and each envelope or package must bear the name and address of the sender legibly written or stamped on the upper left-hand corner.

As all pictures in the test will contain written or printed matter, if mailed, it is absolutely necessary that the package be fully prepaid at postal letter rates, as mail of this character goes to the postoffice as first-class matter. The Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser reserve the right to refuse to consider any sets of titles on which charges for postal delivery are not fully prepaid.

There will be no title or answer book to buy. Lists of Movie Titles will be printed in the Boston American and in the Boston Sunday Advertiser This list appearing will contain among others the correct titles.

Participants who desire further information should address their inquiries to the Movie Play Title Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass. Questions will be answered as far as possible through the columns of the Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser. If participants desire personal replies, they should enclose sufficient postage for such a reply, or they may phone Main 5150 or call in person.

The Boston American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser reserve the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that they may deem necessary for fairly and properly conducting the test, and the decision of the Boston American Play Title Editor on any question which may arise will be absolutely final, and the entry of a participant is a complete acceptance of all conditions and regulations now made or to be made.

SEE TEST PICTURE NO. 3 IN TOMORROW'S BOSTON AMERICAN

EASY? CORRECT TITLES WILL BE PRINTED EVERY DAY

In the Movie Player Identity Test, recently closed, success depended upon the participant's knowledge of the features of popular players and second upon his memory.

The Title Test is much clearer; much less difficult.

Below is printed an Offical List of Movie Play Titles.

In this list are the titles of the two Test Pictures shown on this page.

Cut out Test Picture No. 1, for example, and hold it before you in one hand as, with a pencil in the other hand, you study the List of Titles.

By the process of elimination you will find, soner or later, ONE title in this List which fits Picture No. 1 better than any other title.

EASY TO PICK TITLES.

Follow the same course with Test Picture No. 2. What can be the title of this picture "Kismet"? Impossible! "The Kid"? Hardly. "Way Down East"? Not likely. "Humoresque"? Never! Keep on. Eventually you will fall upon a title and exclaim, "Here we are! I have it!"

Write it down. Place Pictures Nos. 1 and 2 away for safe keeping. You are all set for tomorrow and Picture No. 3!

This, it appears to the Title Test Editor, is a Test which should appeal to every member of the family. It is not necessary that you should be a movie fan to walk off with the First Award of $1,000. It IS necessary that you have a quick wit, a lively imagination.

The Title Test Editor is reluctant to emphasize the "money end" of the Test. He prefers to let the cash awards of $1,000, $750, $500, $400, $300, $200, $150, $100, $50, etc., speak for themselves and, preferably, stress the great amount of good fun, clean entertainment this fund Test offers to everybody. (On Saturday the Test Editor meant to write it "carloads of fun." It was printed "carloads of fuel." Showing, perhaps, which particular bill was on the poor fellow's mind.)

HERE YOU ARE! LET'S GO!

Now for the List of Titles, which will be changed weekly. In this list permit me to remark again, are the correct titles of today's two pictures:

Kismet
The Kid
Way Down Eas.
Humoresque
Buried Treasure
The Inside of the Cup
The Life of the Party

Here's a Good Tip on How to Win a Film Title Prize

The Title Test Editor was asked today which, in his opinion, is the "easier" Test, the new Test or the Movie Player Test.

His answer is, unqualifiedly, the present Test.

But, as the old gentleman said when he kissed the cow, "everybody to his taste."

The Title Test Editor's reason for preferring his own to the Test recently presided over by the Player Test Editor is that in the new Test everything is before you.

On the one hand, the Test Drawing, and only one drawing for each day.

TITLE LIST A BIG AID.

On the other hand, the List of Titles.

You are looking for the correct title for today's Test Picture, and here it is in the List of Titles.

Only one title in this List will fit the Test Drawing to perfection.

There isn't any "catch" about that statement. Try it! Look at the Test Pictures. Study the List of Titles.

The Title Test Editor's fear at the present moment is that every one of you may have every title correct from the very jump. And, unlike the gentleman who wrote about the Player Pictures, he hasn't a "mask" to his name!

TEST SIMPLE TO FOLLOW.

From beginning to end, the Title Test will follow the lines laid down today. It will be as simple as that!

It WOULD be a difficult—perhaps an impossible—task, if we printed the Test Picture and DID NOT PRINT A LIST OF TITLES WHICH INCLUDES THE CORREST TITLE.

But, here they are together, first the Test Pictures and then the List of Titles. Everybody knows, too, that the movie folk insist upon short, punchy titles, which tell the whole story in a few words. There are no freak titles in the movies.

APPEALS TO YOUNGSTERS.

It IS the opinion of the Title Test Editor, however, that the New Test will not appeal to all who took part in the Player Identity Test. He inclines to the opinion that the present Test will appeal more, especially to the younger folk.

If there is somebody in your home who shows a peculiar facility at the puzzle picture sort of thing, call his (or her) attention to the Movie Play Title Test.

Order Papers Now to Win a Movie Title Prize

If our friends who are entering the Movie Title Test really intend to go through with it to the end they should immediately place an order for the co-operating newspapers for the duration of the sixty-day Test.

Many who entered the Movie Player Test, with an opportunity as good as anybody's, fell by the wayside the first time they were compelled to begin the hunt for a back number of one of the papers. Neither publication is in a position to furnish back copies. The one chance of getting them—and that not always to be depended upon—is through the newsdealer.

TAKE NO CHANCES.

Why take a chance? Why run any risk?

Speak to the newsdealer about it. Tell him you depe him to save a copy of the Bos American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser for you regularly throughout the Title Test. If, having taken your order, the newsdealer fails to deliver, write immediately to the Title Test Editor, No. 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass.

Newsdealers today, remember, order only that number of newspapers that they have reason to believe will be sold. The gamble element in the business of selling newspapers went out with the advent of increased costs of everything that goes to make a newspaper.

ORDERS PAPERS NOW!

Not so very long ago, the dealer "returned" his unsold newspapers. Today, newspapers generally are sold on what is called by the trade a "non-returnable basis."

So, be wise. Place a standing order for the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser and BE SURE OF EVERY DAY'S TITLE TEST PICTURE ON THE DAY OF ITS APPEARANCE.

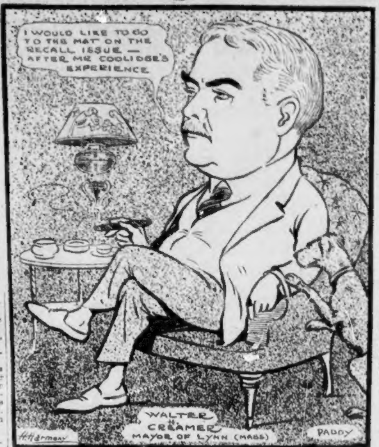
Welcomes Fight Over Recall



I WOULD LIKE TO GO TO THE MAT ON THE RECALL ISSUE — AFTER MR COOLIDGE'S EXPERIENCE.
WALTER H. CREAMER MAYOR OF LYNN (MASS)
PADDY
H. Harmony

Mayor Walter H. Creamer of Lynn would welcome a chance to go to the mat on the question of his recall.

Also he believes taxes and rents will be higher, and wages lower.

He knows nothing about any proposed "shakeup" at Lynn City Hall.

He believes the people of Lynn should have a chance to vote on the question of raising teachers' salaries.

And his closest pal is a young Irish terrier named "Paddy."

All of these facts developed during an interview which Lynn's genial chief executive granted Artist Henry Harmony, and a reporter from the Boston American at his home, No. 4 Prescott road, Lynn, and there were other facts as well.

For some time the Lynn City Hall has been a veritable rumor factory, where stories of efforts to recall Mayor Creamer mingled with tales of a coming shakeup which would replace the present commissioners and heads of departments by others.

"Unlike some other municipalities, Lynn's city department heads are not appointed by the Mayor. They are chosen by the City Council," explained Mayor Creamer, clad in his house slippers, and looking very comfortable in a light smoking jacket as he leisurely puffed a cigar.

"I, therefore, have nothing at all to do with the selection of the heads of departments. It's all done by the City Council. If that body sees fit to make any changes it will undoubtedly do so at the appointed time, early next month.

"I can, however, tell you about the recall matter."

His Honor took an extra long puff of the cigar and smiled.

PUBLIC'S RIGHTS.

"It all grew out of a labor dispute. One of the shoe factories which had a closed shop announced an open shop. That began it. Instead of contenting themselves with the number of pickets provided by law, the unions sent parties of 500 or so men up to that factory every day.

"There were disturbances. I ordered out the police and moved the unlawful gatherings.

"Immediately some representatives of the union appeared at my office.

"'Haven't we got any rights on the streets?' they asked.

"'You certainly have,' I replied, 'but your rights begin where the other fellow's end. He's got some rights, too. Just as long as you keep within the law, and picket you won't be disturbed. But so long as I have a police force in this city and am Mayor, I'm going to see that the rest of the public enjoys its rights, too.'

"That didn't please some of the labor people. But I insisted that the law be maintained.

"So they started a petition for my recall. Were going to have all the necessary signatures in a week, they said. They needed 25 per cent. of the voters at the last election, which, incidentally, was a poorly patronized election.

"After trying for a couple of months they presented the petition, claiming to have the necessary number of signatures. When it was checked up it was found to be 400 names shy. I understood that the matter has now been dropped."

Here His Honor smiled again.

"But I would have liked to go to the mat with them on that issue—especially after Mr. Coolidge's experience."

"Are you against raising the teachers' pay?" he was asked.

"Not if it be submitted to a referendum," was the quick reply.

WANTS PEOPLE CONSULTED.

"You see Lynn is in a peculiar position in regard to its school appropriations. There are, I understand, only two other cities in the Commonwealth in the same position, and one of them is Boston. Lynn does not decide for itself how much it will spend on schools. That is decided for it by the State. In other words we have nothing to say about the matter.

"Lynn teachers do not get as high salaries as is paid in other places in the Commonwealth. But in order to increase their salaries there must be an increased appropriation. That means higher taxes. As, in the final analysis it comes out of the pockets of the taxpayers, I feel that they should be given a chance to vote on the matter. The Lynn representatives in the General Court feel just as I do about the matter.

"If the people of Lynn are willing to pay the teachers more, I certainly am not opposed to it. But I am opposed to spending the voters' money without consulting them.

"Taxes are going to be higher anyway. Our valuation has not increased while expenses have. That will have an effect on rents of course. Rents will be higher.

"I do not see any chance for taxes to be lower or rents either until the era of deflation is over. Commodity prices and wages must both be lower. The workingman must learn that he is just as well off with $20 a week and meat at 15 cents a pound, as with $60 a week and meat 80 cents a pound."

"Has there been much unemployment in Lynn?"

"There is not as much as there was. We took care of a great many cases of distress through the Overseers of the Poor, and for the cases where we did not want to pauperize people temporarily hard up because of lack of work, they were cared for by a special committee out of a special appropriation.

LITTLE UNEMPLOYMENT.

"Just at the present time there is comparatively little unemployment. Our factories are working on what they call their 'Easter trade.' That, however, is of course, only temporary.

"We are facing several strikes. One is threatened at the Little Shoe Factory and another on the Narrow Gauge Road. There is also the possibility of labor trouble on the Bay State Railway.

"This year I did something never before done here. I kept all the city employes at work. It was, as you know, a very open Winter, and up to the present time there was none of the usual snow removal work. By starting three new streets, I have kept them working, however. These streets, on the outskirts of the city run through city property, enhancing the value of the city land, so that it is really a way of investing money for the city of Lynn and at the same time taking care of its employes."

At this point in the interview Paddy bounded into the room and clamored to be introduced.

"My closest pal," explained Mayor Creamer.

And as he bowed his visitors out Mayor Creamer kept a firm hand on Paddy's neck, explaining that the half-grown pup has a habit of running away.

"He keeps the police busy bringing him home. He's the most troublesome runaway in Lynn," said His Honor.

SOMERVILLE LIBRARY ROBBED OF STATIONERY

Stamps, pencils, pens and articles of stationery were stolen from the Somerville Public Library on Central Hill, according to a report made to the Somerville police. Entrance to the library was gained, the police believe, through an open window. Patrolman Howe has recovered some of the articles stolen and the arrest of the young man who entered the building is expected.

'DOROTHY' GONE WITH DIAMOND AND $200

Confederate Vet Waits Vainly at Church After Marriage Agency Courtship

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 28.—Webster Perkins, aged eighty-two, who fought for a lost cause with the armies of the Confederacy, decided today that he had sold his horse and chickens and come East from his farm near Portland, Ore., for another lost cause.

He waited for three days at the Union Station here for "Dorothy Lisbon of Syracuse" to appear for the wedding which they had arranged through a matrimonial agency, but the rosebud in his coat lapel and the carnations in his hand (the means of identification agreed upon) withered along with his hopes. Today he threw the wilted flowers away and started south.

ROSY-CHEEKED HEIRESS.

"Dorothy Lisbon was twenty and had rosy cheeks, the ad in the paper said." The old man told a representative of the Travelers' Association today. "I answered the ad. I was lonely out there on the farm, and she was to inherit a fortune."

He wrote Dorothy that he was old and had nothing but his love to offer—but that he was still able to work and provide for her. He had fought for the Confederacy.

Dolly answered promptly. She wrote:

"Dearest Webbie: Your charming letters have convinced me that you are very kind and I am compelled to forget any other sweetheart I have ever had. I accept your proposal of marriage and am sure we will be happy and will live like two little happy doves. I know you are very brave and as you have written you could not be otherwise, as your brave deeds in the war shall be everlasting. I dearly love brave men—Webbie, you surely were a hero and our two hearts shall beat as one.

(Signed) "SWEETHEART."

DAME AND DIAMOND GONE.

Perkins sold his horse and later his chickens. This was necessary to buy the expensive diamond ring and raise the $200 which he sent for railroad fare and a trousseau to Dorothy.

They were to be married in Washington on March 4. Dorothy was to meet him in Baltimore three days ago.

But Perkins was left "waiting at the church." Dorothy and the diamond ring and the $200 are still missing.

WOMAN SAYS SHE WAS HELD UP IN HER HOME

Mary Clay reported to the police today that she was robbed of $260 in cash by three men, who held her up in her apartment at No. 100 Bower street. The girl said the men were hiding in the apartment when she returned, and one of them searched her person and the apartment while the second held her, and the third pointed a gun and warned her not to scream. She described the men as about twenty-one years old, and of medium height and build.

FALL RIVER PRINTERS ACCEPT $2 INCREASE

Fall River, Feb. 28.—Printers employed in local shops, including three newspapers, have been granted an increase of $2 a week to $38. January 1 they asked for an increase of $12 a week and this was refused by the master printers, who threatened to close their establishments. A few weeks after this was reduced to $6 and the matter has been finally settled by the acceptance of $2.

FIND FREE TAXI STAND SUCCESS IN NEW YORK

Officials Would Not Return to Old System of Private Privilege

New York city instituted public hack stands in 1913, and would not go back to the old system of private hack stands. It is now posible to get a cab almost anywhere in New York, due to the system of free public stands.

This information is contained in a letter sent to Representative Benjamin C. Lane of No. 288 Devonshire street, Boston, in answer to inquiries as to the New York system. It came from James F. Geraghty, Deputy Commissioner of the Department of Licensed Vehicles in New York.

This letter, with other information, is being used to push the campaign for public stands of the 500 and more private cab owners in Boston, by their attorney, A. C. Webber, former assistant district attorney of Suffolk County. The letter follows:

Rep. Benjamin C. Lane:

Dear Sir—In further reference to your letter of February 24, addressed to the Commissioner of Licenses, also in reply to your letter of same date addressed to the Hon. John F. Hylan, Mayor of the city of New York, I beg to say that the system now in vogue in this city in regard to public hackstands is entirely satisfactory, and we feel that it is very much superior to the old system of special stands where a certain favored taxicab concern was privileged to enjoy the exclusive right of patronage of the hotels, clubs and restaurants in this city.

I do not believe that the people of our city would care to return to the former [illegible]. The best argument in substantiation of this is, that when the present public hack ordinance went into effect on August 1, 1913, there were about [illegible] public taxicabs licensed, whereas the records of this office for the year 1920 show that [illegible] taxicabs were licensed. Taxicabs are available nearly everywhere, and the ordinance rates of fare are very much lower than the rates formerly charged by taxicab companies.

I am enclosing, under separate cover, copies of the public hack ordinance, also copies of the rules and regulations governing public hacks and hackmen in this city.

If there is any further information you desire, I shall be very pleased to furnish you with same.

Respectfully,
JAMES F. GERAGHTY,
Deputy Commissioner.

Young Funston Gets Best Rifle Score

San Francisco, Feb. 28.—Frederick Funston, seventeen-year-old son of the late General Frederick Funston, promises to follow in the military footsteps of his illustrious father, according to information given out at Ninth Corps Area Army headquarters.

In a competitive target tournament among teams representing all of the high schools of California, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, Oregon and Idaho, just completed by the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, young Funston hit bulls-eyes enough to be right up at the top.

With a score of 183 out of a possible total of 200, the son of the famous military hero made a higher percentage than is required of soldiers in the army to attain the premier grade of "expert rifleman." Funston is preparing to enter West Point for military training.

NEW YORK PRIEST HONORED BY POPE

Rome, Feb. 28.—Pope Benedict XV. has appointed the Rev. Joseph MacMahon of New York a domestic prelate of the papal entourage, it was learned today.

YOUTHFUL BANK THIEF FACES STERN JUSTICE

Officials Demand Dalton Be Prosecuted to Limit; "I'll Stick," Says Mother

Chicago, Feb. 28.—William Dalton, the boy bank robber, is back in Chicago. And the $772,000 bonds that he stole last Thursday from the Northern Trust Company were returned to the bank vaults.

Today another chapter opened in Dalton's life. The evidence against the seventeen-year-old boy was laid before a grand jury and it is expected he will be indicted. Bank officials said he would be prosecuted to the limit and swift justice demanded.

Mrs. Nora Dalton, the boy's mother, was prostrated today and could not go to the detention home to see her son. His sisters, Mary and Julia, in tears, spent several hours with him.

Mrs. Dalton, from her sickbed, inquired anxiously about her boy.

"He's my boy and I'll stick to him," she said. "I can't help but feel some one put him up to this thing. Oh! how I've prayed he might not be dead or hidden away some place. Now I know he's safe. I'm glad it's over."

PICK BEVERIDGE TO BE ENVOY TO ENGLAND

Harding Has Also Decided on Hill as Ambassador to France, Is Report

Washington, Feb. 28.—Former Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana will be tendered the coveted post of ambassador to Great Britain, one of the first diplomatic appointments by President Harding, it was stated by a high authority here today.

The former senator has not as yet indicated that he will accept, though few men have spurned the Court of St. James. Mr. Beveridge has been an avowed candidate for senator in Indiana, so much so, that Senator Harry S. New, who comes up for re-election in 1922, is an enthusiastic supporter of the diplomatic corps idea.

Dr. Davis Jayne Hill of New York, it was learned, is tentatively slated for ambassador to France.

Ambassador Roland Morris, who, as ambassador to Japan, has been conducting negotiations with Baron Shidehara over the proposed new treaty with that government, will be asked to withdraw his resignation and to serve under the Harding administration.

Colonel George Harvey, who "broke" with President Wilson and figured prominently in bringing out President-Elect Harding as a candidate, may be offered the ambassadorship to Italy or Spain.

FORD'S NAME LINKED WITH HATE, SAYS BERNSTEIN

"SEEKS NOTORIETY IN FALSE CHARGES AGAINST JEWS"

Editor Boston American:—This is the fifth and last article of this series. Although I gave you titles for six articles I find that the third and fifth practically dealt with same phase of subject. I therefore decided to write only five articles.

Best regards. HERMAN BERNSTEIN.

Henry Ford and the Forged Protocols of the Wise Men of Zion.

By HERMAN BERNSTEIN

Author and journalist of international reputation. Authority on Judaism, who spent months investigating Henry Ford's anti-Semitic propaganda campaign.

Copyright, 1921, by the Boston American.

New York, Feb. 28.—The right measure of Henry Ford was taken by the late President Theodore Roosevelt. He compared Ford with Barnum, of circus fame, and said that he had no conception of Americanism, but instead had an extreme idea of the importance and power of his money.

Herman Bernstein

In a volume entitled "Talks with T. R.," by John J. Leary, Jr., Roosevelt's estimate of Henry Ford is recorded as follows:

"Ford," said Theodore Roosevelt, "is a pretty good man for making cheap automobiles. He makes a good car for the money and in his sphere has done a very good work. But he wont stick to his sphere. He would instruct Cosmos.

"It would not be so bad if he knew anything about the matters outside of automobiles that he attempts to manage and direct. He does not seem to have the faintest idea of such matters. He knows nothing of world politics, yet he sets himself up, with the aid of an army of press agents, as the man who must teach everybody.

"He has no conception of what we mean by Americanism and has an extreme idea of the importance and power of his money. He is ignorant, yet because he has been so successful in motors, many, many persons, hardly as ignorant as himself, think him wise in all things, and allow him to influence their views.

"Henry, like Barnum, has been a great advertiser. I do not say his peace ship was an advertising dodge—I will give him the credit for being sincere there, but I won't say that he has not been given credit for a lot of philanthropy that was merely good business. Others of his schemes given much publicity are imaginings that in others would attract no attention."

CAMPAIGN ORGANIZED.

This estimate by Roosevelt was made before Henry Ford had donned the black mantle of the Russian Black Hundreds and appeared in the role of an ignorant anti-Semite in America.

The campaign and conspiracy against the Jews in this country has been engineered with the aid of the following outstanding figures:

1—The Russian reactionary officers and agents of the Black Hundreds, headed by Lieutenant Boris Brasol, who are continuing here the dastardly work of the Russian pogromists, the monarchist elements in this country, who peddled the forged "protocols" among American officials and American publishers.

2—The German anti-Semites and monarchists of the type of "Conrad Siem," author of the imaginary interview with Bismarck or Abraham Lincoln and the Jews published in Henry Ford's weekly, who furnish the "scientific" munitions and poisonous gases for Henry Ford's "educational" campaign.

3—The former agent of the American Military Intelligence Department who conducted a private investigation of the "protocols," securing his information and the interpretation of the "protocols" from the very same Russian reactionary elements that were instrumental in introducing them in this country. He was used by the Russian intriguers to sound the alarm against the imaginary menace of Jewish world control.

4—Then comes Henry Ford, the dupe of the Russian Black Hundreds and the Prussian [illegible] maniacs, the ignorant apostle of Hate, who seeks notoriety at the cost of the martyr nation. His press agents write vituperative articles full of venom and hate and falsehood against the Jews. He himself is too ignorant to realize whither he is drifting, what is being done in his name and at his expense. Chasing the will o' the wisp of notoriety, he is on the warpath, prating of peace, assuming the pose of a defender of the world against imaginary international Jewish plots.

INDEPENDENT'S COMMENT.

When I mentioned some time ago that a representative of the American government submitted to me a translation of the "protocols" and asked for my opinion, the Ford Dearborn Independent made the following comment:

"The incident is all the more preoccupying because it occurred by action of the representative of a government who today is very largely in the hands of, or under the influence of, Jewish interests. It is more than probable that as soon as the activity became known, the investigator was stopped. But it is equally probable that whatever orders may have been given and apparently obeyed, the investigation may not have stopped."

This nonsensical "may" or "may not" is meaningless, but Henry Ford's organ makes the direct charge that the government of the United States "is today very largely in the hands of, or under the influence of, Jewish interests."

I have since learned that the "investigator" who submitted the "protocols" to me was at the time no longer in the Military Intelligence Department, and his investigation was a private investigation.

"Henry Ford not only says that the American government is in the hands or under the influence of Jewish interests, but he has published in his weekly the following statement in which he hurls insults upon the Presidents of the United States:

INSULTS PRESIDENTS.

"Men with a 'past' are specially favored (by the Jews) for presidential office. Men with a 'past' have become Presidents in various countries, including the United States. There is no doubt of that. In some instances, the particular scandal that constitutes the past has been publicly known; in other cases it has been hushed up and lost in the maze of rumor. In American affairs, at least, the woman-note is predominant. In our higher offices that has more frequently occurred than any other, oftener than the money-note. The whole subject is extremely distasteful, but truth has its surgical duties to perform and this is one of them. It may be safely assumed that the custody of the secret is almost entirely with that race (the Jews)."

Henry Ford is responsible for this cowardly and disgusting insinuation against the Presidents of the United States. But this kind of propaganda is quite characteristic of the methods of his entire "educational" campaign against the Jews.

The anti-Semitic series of articles in the Dearborn Independent bristles with falsehoods, vicious insinuations, half-truths and preposterous inventions. It is quite in keeping with the "protocols" sponsored by the "Russian Mystic," Sergius Nilus, the cornerstone upon which Henry Ford is erecting his anti-Semitic structure.

VIEWS OF RUSSIAN PUBLICIST.

An eminent Russian publicist recently wrote of the sponsor of the "protocols" as follows:

"In Russia the problems of Christianity and Judaism have been studied by such men Vladimir Solovyoff, Professor Troitsky, Professor Kokovtsev, Kartashov, Bulgakov, Berdyaevov—men of profound intellect and a living conscience. In them the counterfeit ravings of the ignorant monk (Nilus) evoked but a smile of contempt. The low level of the circles in which men like Nilus moved and worked is only too well known. It was the world of police denunciations, divorce perjuries, monastic servility and feigned, blasphemous piety. In order to attract attention, Nilus' "protocols" of the Wise Men of Zion "had to emigrate from Russia. And the further away they went the better they fared."

I have made a thorough study of the origin of the "protocols of the Wise Men of Zion," and the results of my investigation will show by documentary evidence how the "protocols" had been forged.

Given out years ago as fiction by a German anti-Semitic writer, involved in forgery, it was gradually changed and elaborated, and finally groomed as fact. Agents of the Russian secret police department and of the unscrupulous Black Hundreds then utilized this fiction as the frame work for the "protocols," through which they sought to crush the Jews and prop up the tottering Russian dynasty.

AGENTS AT WORK.

Tsarism destroyed itself, but the agents of Tsarism, still dreaming of their past glory and a restoration of their privileges, are at work again, both here and abroad.

In the war's aftermath the Jews are being blamed for all ills that have befallen mankind. Some blame them for the war, and others for the peace treaty. Some attack them for the defeat of the German military machine, and others for the victory of the allies. In Germany they are attacked by the Junkers for having opposed the submarine warfare and thus assured Germany's defeat; while in some allied countries the Jews are denounced for constituting "the brains of Germany."

All the revolutionary leaders of Germany are credited to the Jews, and Bolshevism is branded as a distinctly Jewish movement; and there are Jew-baiters who in their blind madness have gone as far as to declare that ex-Kaiser Wilhelm was not only influenced by the Jews but is himself of Jewish descent, and for this reason he did not defend Germany as loyally as he should have done. He conspired against the Hohenzollern dynasty and undermined it. He destroyed his own throne because he was serving the secret Jewish world conspiracy.

Upon such absurdities have people been fed, since the armistice, in civilized countries by anti-Semitic agitators and their dupes, while Jews have been slaughtered in the Ukraine, in Poland and in Hungary.

Upon similar absurdities Henry Ford is trying to feed American public opinion. He has forever linked his name with the most infamous dark forces of hate and retrogression—the remnants of the dead autocracies—the real cause of the present world unrest.

LENINE SEIZES BIG SECTION OF TURKEY

Grabs Most of Armenia and Georgia From Under Very Noses of Allies

By Universal Service.

Paris, Feb. 28.—By a daring coup pulled off under the noses of the Big Three who are deliberating in London, Lenine has won the first trick in the struggle for the Near East.

While the Supreme Council was appointing a commission to decide upon the future of Turkey, the Soviet chief took the destiny of the former Ottoman empire in his own hands by occupying without bloodshed the entire province of Georgia. This coup included the most important port of Batoum, the terminous of the Batoum-Baku oil pipe line, the longest in the world. During the occupation 800 foreigners, mostly English, were interned.

LENINE REALLY DICTATOR.

By this move Lenine has become the controller not only of the most important oil fields in Asia, but actually the owner of a larger slice of the former Turkish empire than the Allies. All eastern Turkey, comprising Armenia, Azerbaijan and Georgia, are now definitely "Red," with Soviet governments, while central Turkey is held impregnably by Mustapha Kemal, who is practically acting under orders from Moscow.

Thus while theoretically the Allies have the disposal of the Ottoman empire, actually the most valuable part of it has already been grabbed by Lenine who, through his alliance with the Meusselmans, must henceforth be regarded as the real dictator of Asia.

THIRD OF WORLD'S OIL.

How vital this dictatorship is can be gauged by the fact that experts estimate that one-third of the potential oil supply of the world is contained in the area which Moscow dominates. Besides the oil there is the enormous mineral, agricultural and industrial wealth of a territory four times large than the whole of Europe.

With a population of 50,000,000 virtually under his thumb, the Communist chief holds the cards for enforcing his recognition and admittance to the World Council.

Is Love Worth More Than $1,000,000

Would you give up $1,000,000 for love?

Would you spurn automobiles, yachts and travel with a woman you cared nothing for to live in a cottage with the wife of your desire?

A. O. McLaughlin of No. 193 West Canton street, South End, says that is what he plans to do.

15,000 JEWISH ALIENS ARRIVE IN BOSTON

Over 15,000 Jewish immigrants have arrived within the last ten days into the port of Boston, according to figures issued by the local branch of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America. Only one per cent. of the new arrivals, the report states, remain in Boston, the remaining 99 per cent. being destined for other sections of the country.

BANDITS' THREAT TO KILL HEARD BY PHONE GIRL

Attleboro Operator Summons Police to Aid of Cripple, but Thieves Escape

Attleboro, eb. 28.—Answering the drop on the switchboard at 2:30 a. m., Miss Emma Jamieson, night operator at the telephone exchange, heard the words, "hold up your hands and deliver all your money before we blow your brains out."

She at once connected the police station with the call and Patrolman Fournier heard enough conversation to know that a holdup was being committed. After a few commands, one robber said, "Cut those telephone wires."

The call came from the store of Philip St. Germaine in Phillips street, Germantown district, and with Patrolmen Norwood, Paradis and O'Donnell Fournier hurried to the store.

In the meantime the robbers, both of whom were masked, demanded that St. Germaine, who is a cripple with no legs, deliver all his money.

St. Germaine insisted that he had no more than $30 in the cash drawer, which the thieves took. They gave back a ring and watch, declaring they were of no value.

After threatening St. Germaine's life they warned him that if he told the police or the newspapers they would come back Monday night.

The men had escaped when the officers arrived. St. Germaine lives alone in a room adjoining the store. He would not give a good description of the men.

GIRL KILLED BY ONE-MAN CAR IN SOMERVILLE

Mary Canavan Struck on Beacon Street Returning From Mass; Motorman Arraigned

Miss Mary Canavan, twenty years old, of No. 115 Museum street, Somerville, died in an ambulance shortly after being struck by an outbound one-man car on Beacon street, near Kent street, Somerville. Motorman Roache of No. 707 Massachusetts avenue, Arlington, of the car, was arrested and was to be arraigned for manslaughter in Somerville Court today.

Miss Canavan, who came here from County Clare, Ireland, to the home of her uncle, Dennis J. O'Callaghan last August, was returning from mass at St. Catherine's Church. She started across the track in front of the car, according to Motorman Roache, but suddenly drew back and was hit by a corner of the car.

The car was said to have continued on 100 feet before stopping. Roache was arrested at the North Cambridge car barn by Lieutenants Damery and Kennedy of Somerville and released under $6000 bonds provided by the Elevated.

Medical Examiner McCaffrey stated that death was caused by a fracture of the skull and multiple injuries.

Bishop Moulton to Speak

Do This For Constipation

THE public should know that there is a vast difference in the action of the various remedies for constipation. Some are "flushes," purges, physics. They gripe and weaken.

For lasting effect use a laxative. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin acts gently and mildly so that even a tiny baby can use it with safety. It is a compound of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. A sixty-cent bottle will last an average family many months.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the most popular of all laxatives and more is used in American homes than any other. Last year eight million bottles were sold by druggists, the largest sale in the world.

Physician Explains Who Should Take Nuxated Iron

Practical Advice on How To Help Build Up Great Strength, Energy and Endurance.

"Lack of iron in the blood not only makes a man a physical and mental weakling, nervous, irritable, easily fatigued, but it utterly robs him of that virile force, that stamina and strength of will which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. "It may also transform a beautiful, sweet-tempered woman into one who is cross, nervous and irritable. I have strongly emphasized the great necessity of physicians making blood examinations of their weak, anaemic, run-down patients. Thousands of persons go on year after year suffering from physical weakness and a highly nervous condition due to lack of sufficient iron in their red blood corpuscles without ever realizing the real cause of their trouble. Without iron in your blood your food merely passes through the body something like corn through an old mill with rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind.

"For want of iron you may be an old man at thirty, dull of intellect, poor in memory, nervous, irritable, and all 'run down,' while at 50 or 60 with plenty of iron in your blood you may still be young in feeling, full of life, your whole being brimming over with vim and energy."

But be sure the iron you take is organic iron—Nuxated Iron—and not metallic iron which people usually take. Organic iron—Nuxated Iron—is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, while metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron filings and is therefore an entirely different thing from Nuxated Iron. Nuxated Iron represents organic iron in such a highly concentrated form that one dose is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one-half quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen baked apples. It is like taking extracts of beef instead of eating pounds of beef.

Over 4,000,000 people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It quickly helps make rich red blood, revitalize wornout exhausted nerves and give increased strength and energy. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if it does not produce satisfactory results.

How the plainest woman can be pretty

A winning personality and a perfect complexion constitute a combination of charm which mere prettiness of features cannot rival.

The girl with the radiant, clear complexion is sure of admiration no matter what her type. The woman with a smooth, flawless skin is always considered young.

Such a complexion isn't a gift of Nature, but an attraction every woman can achieve. The secret was discovered in the days of ancient Egypt, was practiced by Cleopatra.

Begin this treatment today

Wash your face gently with the mild, creamy lather of Palmolive, massaging it softly into the skin. Rinse thoroughly and it will carry away all the dangerous accumulations which so often cause skin infection.

Then apply a touch of cold cream, smoothing it into the skin. You will be delighted at the way your complexion looks and feels, at its smoothness, fine texture and fresh color. This special face washing regime is thorough without irritation.

Remember blackheads come from pores filling up with dirt—that pimples follow when this dirt carries infection.

Daily cleansing is your protection against skin troubles. Powder and rouge are harmless when applied to a clean skin.

Discovered 3,000 years ago

The use of Palm and Olive oil as cleansers is as old as history. Ancient Egypt discovered their value 3,000 years ago.

These oils are combined in Palmolive soap because modern science can discover no finer, milder ingredients. They are cosmetic oils, soothing and healing. They impart these virtues to Palmolive soap.

And best of all the price of Palmolive puts it, though so great a luxury, within the reach of all.

Only 10 cents

Although money can't command finer, milder, more beneficial cosmetic soap, modern manufacturing science has reduced the price to 10 cents a cake. The enormous demand keeps the Palmolive factories working day and night. It permits the purchase of the costly ingredients in gigantic volume.

Thus while women prefer Palmolive for their facial soap, it is also the popular family soap of America. The toilet luxury all may enjoy at the price of ordinary soap.

Try Cleopatra's way to complexion beauty

She used cosmetics of every kind to enhance her charm, but cleansing with Palm and Olive oils came first. The same rule, applied today, will keep your complexion fresh, youthful and free from blemishes.

Use the same Palm and Olive oils, mild and soothing. They are scientifically combined for the use of modern women in Palmolive—the beautifying cleanser.

DON'T SUFFER WITH NEURALGIA

Use Soothing Musterole

When those sharp pains go shooting through your head, when your skull seems as if it would split, just rub a little Musterole on your temples and neck. It draws out the inflammation, soothes away the pain, usually giving quick relief.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment, made with oil of mustard. Better than a mustard plaster and does not blister.

Many doctors and nurses frankly recommend Musterole for sore throat, bronchitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet—colds of the chest (it often prevents pneumonia). It is always dependable.

Simple Way to End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.—Advertisement.

LAY DEATH OF PARKHURST TO ANTI-TOXIN

Charge Overdose Was Given, However, Is Denied by Late Governor's Doctor

Augusta, Me., Feb. 28.—A new phase was given today to the controversy over the death of the late Governor Frederic Hale Parkhurst, when the charge was made public at the State House that he had recovered from diphtheria, but had really died from an overdose of anti-toxin.

Rumor had it that 80,000 units of anti-toxin had been administered to him; that 5,000 units was the usual preventive dose and that a maximum of 30,000 units was administered only on rare occasions, and then with impunity.

Investigation among specialists showed the anti-toxin theory to be in the same category as other products of gossip and speculation circulated in connection with the Governor's death and discarded.

DOCTOR DENIES OVERDOSE.

Dr. Richard H. Stubbs, who attended Governor Parkhurst throughout his illness, admitted to a Boston American reporter today that a maximum of 80,000 units had been administered to the patient in three doses, 30,000 units on the morning after he was stricken, 20,000 units at noon and 30,000 at midnight of the same day.

"The best authorities tell us," added Dr. Stubbs, "hat you cannot administer too much anti-toxin. The fact that Governor Parkhurst quickly responded, rallied and regained normal pulse, temperature, appetite and spirit for four days before he was seized with his fatal attack, shows that the amount of anti-toxin given him was beneficial. The story that he died from the effects of an over-dose of anti-toxin is as absurd as other wild stories told about the case."

Other experts agreed with Dr. Stubbs.

START REFORM MOVEMENT.

Governor Parkhurst's conviction that he was "the victim of life insurance examination" and his attempt, just before his death, to bring about reforms to protect the public from the experience he had undergone, have started a movement in Maine which seeks to modify the medical procedure of insurance companies and the exercise of greater care on the part of the medical profession in general.

The practice of placing clinical thermometers in the mouths of patients is deplored here. Physicians and members of the Legislature agreed that there was no necessity for using the thermometer thus on applicants for insurance. Doctors and insurance agents said only a few insurance companies in the country demanded mouth temperatures where registration is usually most prompt.

The popular theory here in official and medical circles was that the placing of a clinical thermometer under a patient's arm was less hazardous and every bit as satisfactory. Talk of legislative action along the lines suggested by the dying Governor increased today at the State House.

Brown Jug Pokes Fun at Herald

The Jugglers are glad that the Herald has been bold enough to make an attack upon the wicked dances of the twentieth century and upon the naughty girls and boys that do them. We agree perfectly with the editorials which have appeared in the Herald. The modern dances should be stopped, and we should introduce in their stead dances of real artistic and educational value. The minuet and the quadrille in the future should take the place of the disgusting shimmy and the camel walk.

And we would like to suggest that at all Union Dances the young ladies shall remain in one room and do folk dances, and that the young gentlemen shall remain in another room and shall do clog dances.

If it should happen that there be persons present who object to dancing in the fashion we prescribe, they should be slapped relentlessly upon the wrist with a gentleman's calling card and should then be sent home to their parents. We are sure that if these suggestions were followed that the wicked girls could not so easily lead the Brown boys astray.—From the Brown Jug, monthly magazine at Brown University, commenting on the Brown Herald's recent attack on dances and debutantes.

OFFERS TO WED GIRL BETRAYED BY HIS SON

Divorced French Girl, Here on La France, Awaits Arrival of Widower, 62

New York, Feb. 28.—A romance, perhaps without parallel, awaits completion today at Ellis Island, a romance in the form of an irregular triangle—two men, a father and son, and a woman of France.

The son, a lieutenant in the American expeditionary force, fell in love with the Frenchwoman, already married, while stationed in France. Although married himself, he gave her an engagement ring. Her husband divorced her and then to save the situation the father of the American lieutenant, a widower, offered himself to the Frenchwoman as her husband.

"I, the undersigned," he wrote in an affidavit, "being a widower by death, desire and hereby promise to marry the said mentioned Madame Vennet as soon as she arrives in this country of America."

The man who has volunteered to take his son's place is Henry George Deppe, sixty-two years old, of Palmerton, Pa., where for many years he has prospered as a contracting carpenter. His son is Lieutenant Arlington Deppe of the Ordnance Department, father of three children, and the woman is Mme. Julia Octavia Vennet, youthful, intelligent and attractive.

She arrived on the steamship La France on its last voyage and, though subject to deportation, awaits the arrival of the elder Deppe with serene confidence.

"I will not despair," she declared today when the widower failed to arrive as scheduled. "Ah, I know he will come for the honor of the name."

She said that her husband, a French soldier, had divorced her because of the attentions of Lieutenant Deppe and related how the American soldier had then given her an engagement ring which she still wears. She showed letters from the father of her American lover in which he promised marriage and containing affectionate sentiments.

BACK BAY WIFE SAID SHE "WANTED TO DIE"

The Back Bay police today were attempting to discover the motive for the alleged suicide attempt of Mrs. Violet Tracey, aged thirty, of No. 31 Gainsborough street, Back Bay, who swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets while visiting at the home of a friend, Mrs. Charlotte Coleman of No. 87 Batavia street.

Other than remarking that she "wanted to die," it is stated that Mrs. Tracey would not discuss her action. She is the mother of a boy of five years and her husband is a traveling salesman and is at present in New York.

URGES PARENTS GUARD HEALTH OF CHILDREN

Too Many Sweets and Lack of Sleep Harmful, Dr. Morse Asserts

"The responsibility of parents toward their children lies in two directions, physical and moral well-being," Dr. John Lovett Morse, of the Harvard Medical School, declared in "A Talk to Parents About Children," at Trinity Church, Newton Centre.

"The greatest fault of the child today," he said, "is the lack of obedience and the lack of reverence for authority. Cruelty is not necessary in training a child, nor is deceit.

"Money is given too freely to children. Bad candy and ice cream are sure to result in illness. Parents cannot bring up children as they would care for an automobile.

"The auto can be scrapped, but the child cannot. The auto can be taken apart and examined. A child cannot be taken apart, but he can be examined. Be sure that he is examined, especially his teeth.

"The child of today gets too much sugar. Sugar is not necessary for a child's well-being. Take the Eskimos—they never get any sugar, and yet they are one of the healthiest people on the earth. Sleep is essential for good health. The child of today stays up too late. Every child up to the age of eight years ought to be in bed at 7 o'clock, and up to the age of fifteen years at 8 o'clock. If a child refuses to go to bed early tie him in if necessary. I am sure one treatment would be enough."

Auditor Cook Fights Big Devilfish

Speaking of fish stories, State Auditor Alonzo B. Cook has just won an exciting battle with a giant devilfish off Clearwater, Fla.

Charles F. Hale, proprietor of a furniture store in the Field's Corner section of Dorchester, was present when it occurred, and, in a letter to friends here acts as Cook's Boswell.

The devilfish succumbed to the Bay State official after a seven-minute fight. When landed it was found to weigh 310 pounds, the largest caught on that strip of coast in four years.

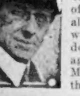
WILSON'S BAN ON DEBS IS AMAZING, SAYS HAPGOOD

By NORMAN HAPGOOD

Editorial Correspondent of Boston American

Washington, Feb. 28.—The greatest psychological mystery connected with the administration of Woodrow Wilson has been his treatment of those who were opposed to war in 1917 as he was himself in 1914. The extraordinarily severe treatment of that class of persons has to be taken into consideration along with the equally severe treatment of those who have expressed Communist and Socialist doctrines. The severity in both cases has been against the best American tradition and against Mr. Wilson's own prevailing theories. Hence the mystery.



Norman Hapgood

I have received a letter from the attorney for certain American Communists, in which he says:

You probably noticed in the press that in the case of the four Russians, Jaboc Abrams, Samuel Lipman, Hyman Lachowsky and Mollie Steimer, that the President reduced their sentences from twenty years and fifteen years to two years, six months actual imprisonment, which means one year three months for the boy and one year nine months for the girl."

I certainly noticed it and [illegible] certain inner reflections on it. The letter then asks about a reconsideration of the matter, "allowing the Russians to be released at once especially in view of the fact that deportation proceedings against all of them have been completed and, immediately upon their release, they will be sent on their way to Russia. I think a little personal pressure would do it just at this time."

Pressure will not do any good in the last days of this administration. Its mind has long been made up how to treat Socialists, both here and in Russia. The only possible value in agitation is to prepare Messrs. Harding, Hughes and Daugherty to take a fresh view of the facts involved and of the principles of freedom.

Justice Holmes Opposed 20 Years' Sentence

The case referred to was the one in which Mr. Justice Holmes said:

"In this case sentences of twenty years imprisonment have been imposed for the publishing of two leaflets that I believe the defendants had as much right to publish as the government has to publish the Constitution of the United States now vainly invoked by them."

Professor Chaffee, in his book called "Freedom of Speech," says of this case:

"The defendants were not prosecuted for pacifist or pro-German utterances—but for agitation against the government's Russian policy."

On August 3, 1916, our government came out against military intervention in Russia and explained why it sent troops to Siberia. Professor Chaffee goes on:

"The Soviet government failed to distinguish between military intervention and the arrival of foreign troops on Russian soil. The diplomatic breach was complete. Soon afterwards the newspapers were filled with accounts of Bolshevist atrocities."

Of course the outstanding one of these cases of imprisonment for expressing opinions unpopular at the moment is the Debs case. Some readers will have noticed that the class in economics in Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., have asked the Department of Justice to allow Debs to address them. Betting is 217½ to 1 at present against the permission being granted.

A favorite indoor pastime in Washington is guessing at why the President has insisted on keeping so peaceable and gentle a man in jail, two and a quarter years after the war ended, and about two years after foreign countries have turned loose all prisoners of that type. Many think that, as a mere courtesy to nearly a million voters, their candidate should have freedom.

Wilson Reversed His 1914 Attitude

A high official in the government gave me a technical explanation of the refusal to restore Debs to freedom. He said pardons are not granted except on application, and Debs will not apply.

That will not hold water. I happen to know another case where a man steadfastly refused to apply for a pardon and has been turned loose nevertheless.

The extraordinary thing about this case is that a pardon was refused by the President after the Attorney-General had recommended it. The general practice is for the President to grant all pardons recommended by the Department of Justice and some that are not recommended. A blunt refusal, without explanation, to pardon when pardon is recommended by the department, is probably without precedent.

The President himself has given privately an explanation. He has said he would never pardon a man whose stand has interfered with the protection given to our boys abroad. That excuse for punishment of minority opinion will be recognized as an old friend. It prevailed in all wars. It would not be an astonishing reason in the mouths of many, who have always rushed to it as the basis for oppression, but it is a most amazing state of mind to exist, twenty-seven months after victory, in the President who in 1914 pleaded for one spot on the earth free from war mania.

BASIL KING WARNS OF WAR WITH BRITAIN

Basil King, author and novelist, in an address at the Washington memorial exercises in the Old North Church, declared the thing he most dreaded was a great conflict between the United States and Great Britain.

Such a possibility, he warned, might come when least expected, the crisis in a fusion of long smouldering differences and national ambitions. "We should recognize that this crisis can come and by individual work within ourselves fight against any such happening," he said.

SOMERVILLE'S TRAFFIC POLICE TO WEAR WHITE

Traffic police officers in Somerville are to be equipped with white belts and cross straps, similar to those worn by the Boston traffic officers on pleasant days, and white rubber coats and boots on stormy days, according to orders adopted by the Somerville Board of Aldermen.

NATIVE MUSIC BY PEOPLE'S SYMPHONY

Five American Composers on Mollenhauer's Program; Dalvarez in Concert

By FRED J. McISAAC

A Symphony concert composed entirely of American compositions was performed by the People's Symphony Orchestra yesterday afternoon at Convention Hall. The composers favored were Henry Hadley, Gilbert, Foote, Chadwick and MacDowell.

The American composer who has the technique and the industry to write symphonic music is not so numerous that selecting an All-America program is an easy task. Our composers are apt to complain that their works cannot get a hearing, but the symphonic works which do get upon the program of big orchestras are rarely sufficiently inspired to justify taking up the time of an audience.

MacDOWELL AS LEADER.

Of the five composers who were represented yesterday only one, MacDowell, actually possessed the divine gift of melody. The others are good journeymen composers who turn out what the Germans call chapel-master compositions, respectable but not sublime.

Gilbert's comedy overture is distinguished for ingenious orchestral treatment of commonplace themes. Hadley's Opera Azora and his one act opera "Cleopatra's Night" offer little that is brilliant. Foote's suite "Omar Kayyam" is politely Oriental until you think of Rimsky-Korsakoff, and Chadwick's Symphonic Sketches show only glimpses of unusual merit. The MacDowell Suite "Indian" alone exhibits true originality and positive genius.

The worst of it is that Emil Mollenhauer knows American compositions and selected these works because they represent about the best our composers have done to date.

The People's Symphony Orchestra has now given more than a dozen concerts and it plays with the grace, beauty of tone and precision of a really fine orchestra. Mollenhauer conducts effectively.

DALVAREZ SIGNS.

Marguerite Dalvarez, the Peruvian contralto, who sang with the Boston Opera Company during its final years, gave a concert at Symphony Hall yesterday with Mischa Levitski, the pianist.

D'Alvarez, in my opinion, is the greatest contralto now in active service. The voice is a heroic one, of marvelous beauty and terrific power. She is no mezzo-soprano who switches from a soprano role to a contralto and back again. The chest notes are stunning in their sonorousness, and the voice from top to bottom is a pure contralto, indescribably lovely. D'Alvarez is not as great an artist as she is a voice. Upon a concert platform and in a recital program she lacks flexibility and versatility. In her earlier numbers she flatted a good deal, but this might have been nervousness.

Levitzki has already been heard in Boston within a few weeks. He is a very gifted pianist, who increases in favor with every hearing.

WEST ACTON PASTOR HAS CALL TO SALEM

A call has been extended the Rev. George L. Michelson of West Acton to become pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church in Salem, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of the pastor, the Rev. Reuben J. Davis, who has become minister of the Arlington Heights Baptist Church.

IN COMEDY

HAZEL DAWN

Hazel Dawn will play the leading role in the new A. H. Woods' farce, "Getting Gertie's Garter," by Avery Hopwood and Wilson Collison, which will be presented at the Plymouth Theatre on Monday evening, March 7.

Miss Dawn is easily one of the most versatile of American actresses. Her accomplishments, aside from acting, are singing, dancing, riding, swimming, playing golf and tennis and designing new clothes and hats. She studied music and things, as she puts it, in Paris and Munich. At present Miss Dawn lives in Amityville, Long Island. She is a native of Ogden, Utah, and is one of several sisters, who have won prominence on the stage. Her youngest sister, Eleanor, appears with her in "Getting Gertie's Garter." Miss Dawn had her first chance on the stage in a piece called "Dear Little Denmark" at the Prince of Wales Theatre in London.

EXPLAINS U. S. INCOME TAX AND INSURANCE

Insurance money received by beneficiaries or the compensation for personal injuries or sickness received from accident or health insurance or under the workmen's compensation act, are not taxable under the Federal income tax laws, according to Collector Mitchell. However, if a person received from a policy any sums in excess of the premium paid, such excess is considered as income for the year received and should be reported on the return.

SOCIALISTS GAIN IN FRENCH ELECTIONS

Paris, Feb. 28.—Extremists and moderate Socialists made big gains in the chamber of deputies elections Sunday, it was revealed by the returns today. Two of the Socialist candidates in Paris were elected, one of them replacing President Millerand. The Socialist vote was estimated at 66,264 against 46,995 for the government candidates.

The final balloting will not take place until March 13.

FATHER FALLON OF LEE BURIAL WEDNESDAY

Lee, Feb. 28.—Funeral services for Rev. William B. Fallon, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church, who died suddenly from a heart ailment, will be held Wednesday in St. Mary's Church. Father Fallon was fifty-five years of age.

NEW ENGLAND TRADE REVIEW

New England Leads Business Recovery

New England business has passed the doldrums; better conditions all over this section are reported, with textile plants and shoe factories—major lines—steadily increasing operations. But the perpendicular decline in operations and prices during the last half of 1920, were so drastic that manufacturers and merchants have been left dazed and a tone of caution prevails.

The wave of optimism that spread over the country in January has subsided some, and it will take important constructive events to keep up the momentum. Great things are expected of the incoming administration at Washington—tax reforms, protective tariff, etc—and these should make for better times.

N. E. LEADS RECOVERY.

New England was hit first by the deflation movement and now it is leading in the recovery. Conditions here merely reflect the general situation throughout the country, for New England lives by its manufactures and it takes the rest of the country and Europe for that matter to keep the wheels humming here.

Reports from other sections of the country show improvement. Automobile centres are more active; an official of the General Motors Corporation says that in a month or so the plants of this giant concern will be close to 50 per cent. capacity in operation. Further decreases in the price of steel—a barometer—are expected before better times generally can come.

Cotton mills in New England are practically all operating. The spurt in business that came in January was substantial enough to arrest the downward trend of domestic consumption of cotton. Last August consumption was 483,193 running bales. By December the consumption had dropped to 294,851, but in January the total was 366,270. A small reaction but nevertheless significant.

The tremendous supply of cotton in the South is too well known for further description. This can be measured by the drop in cotton quotations on the New York board, where futures are selling at 12 cents a pound, compared with 40 cents last July.

SHOE PLANTS ACTIVE.

New England shoe factories are today running at better than 50 per cent capacity. Buying for Spring wear has been encouraging, particularly in women's wear. Many plants are working at capacity in women's footwear.

Wage cuts have been the order of the day in practically all lines. In Manchester, N. H., employes of the F. M. Hoyt Shoe Company have voted to accept a 20 per cent. reduction in pay, 10 per cent. March 1 and 10 per cent May 1. The New Hampshire board of arbitration recommended this course.

In Haverhill, where the shoe business had been the dullest in history, plants are running about 60 per cent. capacity. Representatives of the employes, the city and State, are investigating the shoe situation throughout New England to ascertain what reduction in wages would be fair.

LEATHER LOSSES LARGE.

Some weakness has set in in the hide and leather end of the business. New low points have been struck in some grades. Light native cow hides are down to 10 cents, branded cows at 9 cents, and heavy Texas steers at 10 cents a pound. Quotations are about 80 per cent. below the 1919 "peak."

Heavy losses have been taken by leather firms as well as those in cotton cloth and woolen goods. Central Leather Co. reports a loss of over $22,000,000 and American Hide & Leather "went in the hole" to the tune of over $7,000,000. The Armour Leather Co. closed its year with a deficit of $4,313,000.

BETTER TERMS AHEAD.

The situation among woolen companies is not unlike that in leather. But the worst seems past. Business has been picking up, and the reception given to the American Woolen Company opening of overcoatings and other heavy fabrics, has been encouraging. Cuts as high as 50 per cent. compared with 1920 have brought orders.

Some idea of how drastic the liquidation at wholesale has been may be indicated by Bradstreet's report that by last January prices had dropped 40 per cent from the peak made in February, 1920, and the average in January was only 34 per cent. above the 1913 level.

But this is water that has passed the dam. The pendulum is swinging the other way and better times are approaching.

CARMEN CLAIM 5-CENT FARES POSSIBLE NOW

Lawrence Workers Prepared to Show Bay State Expenses Not Materially Increased

Lawrence, Feb. 28.—Claiming that the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway is operating its cars on practically the same expense as in the time of five-cent fares, the Street Carmens' Union of this city proposes to offer strong resistance to the wage cut of 18 per cent., which the road will make among its employes.

President John F. O'Brien of the Lawrence union and other officials are confident that they will win if the cut is arbitrated. Various changes will be asked for in the agreement between the union and the road which expires May 1. It is known that the union will present new demands April 1, but it is not known whether or not will include a higher wage scale.

"When the patrons of the road were paying the five-cent fare we were paid at the rate of 33 cents an hour," one union official said in discussing the situation. "There were two employes in charge of a car then and the company therefore paid 66 cents per hour to man a car. Today we have one-man cars here and a man's pay is 67 cents per hour."

As a result of arbitration proceedings held last Fall the men were granted an increase in pay, retroactive to May 1. Through an error, it is claimed that the men did not receive their just due and that about $10 each is owed them.

It is proposed that they split the difference with the company and pay half the expense which will be entailed in checking up the alleged error. There are 250 employes of the company in this city. Lawrence witnessed for the first time today the operation of one-man two-truck cars. Twelve of them will be running here by the end of the week, it was announced.

HEAD OF AMERICAN GLUE CO., KING UPTON, DIES

Marblehead, Feb. 28.—King Upton, president of the American Glue Company, philanthropist, prominent Mason and clubman, is dead at his home here, following an attack of pneumonia. He was ill a week. For years he was prominent in yachting circles and was a member of the Boston, Eastern and Portland Yacht Clubs.

KING AND 'DOLLAR PRINCESS' ARE QUARRELLING

Former Mrs. Leeds Not Present at Wedding of Prince George of Greece

Paris, Feb. 28.—Rumors that there is a quarrel between the Princess Christopher, formerly Mrs. William B. Leeds, and her brother-in-law, King Constantine of Greece, gained strength here today.

It was announced that the princess was not present at the wedding in Bucharest of Prince George of Greece to Princess Elisabeth of Rumania, although officially included in the list of bridesmaids.

The "Dollar Princess" maintained her refusal to attend despite an urgent telegram from Queen Marie begging her to let bygones be bygones, which is taken to refer to the wordy quarrel between the queen and the princess while they were in Paris last Summer.

The words were occasioned by the refusal of the princess to provide a dowry of a million dollars for Prince George unless Rumania would officially side with Constantine's efforts to regain his throne.

Bucharest has given over to the wildest rejoicings. Church bells ring continuously. The bride was garbed in white satin and crowned by a diamond tiara formerly belonging to Queen Victoria of England. It was a gift from Queen Marie to her daughter.

It is understood that the former Mrs. Leeds is going at once to America. She is expected to arrive in New York early in March to meet her seventeen-year-old son, William B. Leeds, Jr., who is being rushed here for a surgical operation on his arm. He is reported to have been bitten by some poisonous insect while hunting in the jungles of Sumatra.

SOMERVILE HOSPITAL NURSES TO GRADUATE

Nine nurses will receive diplomas this evening at the first public graduation of nurses, who have completed their course, at the Somerville Hospital, in Unitarian Hall, Highland avenue, Somerville. Frederick W. Parker will preside and the speakers will be Dr. John T. Bottomley of this city, George S. Lovejoy, president of the hospital corporation, and Miss Laura Richards, the first woman graduate. Mayor Charles W. Eldridge will present the diplomas. Undergraduate nurses in uniform will act as ushers. The public graduation is the first of its kind ever held by the hospital and was arranged by a committee, consisting of Frederick W. Parker and John B. Conant of the trustees, and Miss Julia Leach, superintendent of the hospital.

ACCUSED SLAYER IS IDENTIFIED BY SIX

Springfield, Feb. 28.—Giovanni Vilardo of Wilcox street, arrested for the murder of Vincenzo Camoso on the 20th, was identified by the wife of the murdered man and five other witnesses. All are being held in the York Street Jail. Peter Verterano, the second victim of the shooting, now at Springfield Hospital, also identified Vilardo. The arrest was made by Detective-Captain Frank W. Quilly and Lieutenant Patrick J. Fenton. The shooting followed a card game at Camoso's house, No. 14 Howard place.

SAVED FROM JAIL TERM BY HIS LARGE FAMILY

North Adams, Feb. 28.—Frank Stycyanki, charged with larceny of cloth valued at $65 from the Arnold Print Works, was saved from a jail sentence in the local court because he is the sole support of a wife and seven small children. The court imposed a fine of $75, which was paid. Stycyanki paid a fine of $50 in the local court two weeks ago on a liquor charge.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes —Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 15c and 30c.—Advertisement.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Good Points of the Blonde and Brunette Actress on the Movie Screen.

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

Blonde or brunette? Which wins? Catherine Calvert, above, and Eva Novak, below.

DOES the blonde or the brunette get the best of it in the movies?

It is more or less a matter of photography, of course, but according to the producers and directors psychology is creeping into it, too. It is becoming a case of the emotional player or the comedienne.

For the most part we find that the emotional actresses are dark while the comediennes and ingenues are blonde. For instance, Pauline Frederick, Catherine Calvert, Clara Kimball Young, Dorothy Glaum and Norma Talmadge all play either "vamp" parts or highly dramatic and stormy ones.

On the other hand, Mary Pickford, Wanda Hawley, June Caprice, Constance Talmadge, Billie Burke, Eva Novak, Mildred Harris and Katherine MacDonald — the best-known blondes of the films—all play lighter roles. Why? Hasn't the brunette any sense of humor, and isn't the blonde capable of emotion? That, no one has attempted to answer yet.

Allen Holubar, who has just finished directing his wife, Dorothy Phillips, in "Man, Woman, Marriage," has interesting views on the subject.

"When motion pictures were first made, the majority of directors turned down their thumbs on blondes," he said the other day. "Then a short time later the blonde stock soared and most of our feminine stars had light hair—Mary Pickford, Lillian Gish, Constance Talmadge and Billie Burke for example.

"The cause of this was, I think, the coming into use of the spotlight and the Klieg lights. All sorts of effective poses were made use of with blonde heads which were impossible with darker hair. For a time the brunettes were pretty dubious about thir chances for big parts.

"Even the blondes have to darken their hair and eyelashes and brows in order to have their features register properly, otherwise they have insipid expressions on the screen.

"Those who have been folowing the screen closely find that the producers and directors are beginning to show a tendency toward brunettes, probably because the present trend of the stories is toward the intensely dramatic and striking.

"Tomorrow which shall it be—blonde or brunette? It rests with the directors and cameras. Personally, I feel that neither type will have it all to herself—it will be nip and tuck to the end."

CARMEL MYERS MARRIED.

CARMEL MYERS, Universal's newest star, refuses to have her husband known as Mr. Carmel Myers, as so often happens to stars' husbands. He must make a name for himself before she will acknowledge him. Therefore, when she married I. G. Kornblum, a musical composer, on July 16, 1919, she swore him to secrecy regarding the marriage until he should have his musical comedy, "Blue Eyes," produced on Broadway.

Now that "Blue Eyes" is a New York success with such stars as Lew Fields and Mollie King heading the cast, the news of the marriage has come out.

The romance started when they were children in Los Angeles, then Kornblum came east to college and Miss Myers went into the movies, first appearing in D. W. Griffith's 'Intolerance." Later she came to New York to appear in the stage production, "The Magic Melody" and there they renewed their friendship.

ZERO WEATHER SUNBURN.

PITY the poor girls who, clad in low-cut evening gowns in Winter weather, got so burned that they had to call a doctor!

The movies are always bringing up something new. Now it's Klieg light-burn. The other day seven "extra" girls were working in the big Klondike dance hall scene of "The Idol of the North," starring Dorothy Dalton.

When the director sent them to positions near the big studio lights, they stuck to their posts like soldiers until the last scene was shot. Then they discovered that their arms and backs were as singed by the lights as they had ever been by the hottest July sun.

It's a fact that these Klieg lights are so strong that the players and directors often wear dark glasses when they're not working. While they were "shooting scenes" at the Broadwell studios in Medford, Al Hall, the director, put on smoked "specs" when they turned on the glaring light, and Colin Chase, the juvenile, called "time" every few minutes to bathe his eyes.

"I burned them yesterday," he explained. That no one offered him any sympathy or showed any concern about it proves what a common occurence such burns are.

WHAT THE CAMERA MISSED

WALLACE REID, who hasn't had a vacation in several years, is to treat himself to a round-the-world trip next Summer.

SIR JAMES M. BARRIE announced the other day that he would come to America next July to supervise the filming of "Peter Pan." He has given a good deal of time to studying studio methods in the Famous Players-Lasky's London branch.

AFTER MORE than twenty months' delay George Loane Tucker's second production, "Ladies Must Live," will be released. Mr. Tucker has been ill for some months and was unable to cut and edit the film after it was all taken. It is said to surpass his former picture, "The Miracle Man." Betty Compson, Leatrice Joy and Lulu Warrenton play the leading roles.

ENGAGEMENTS and weddings seem to be the order of the day in Hollywood now. Leatrice Joy, Goldwyn leading woman, has just announced that she will marry Jack Gilbert, now playing with the Fox forces in California. The date of the wedding hasn't been set yet.

IT IS RUMORED that Jack Barrymore may play "Faust" in the production that D. W. Griffith is planning to make. Barrymore has signed up with Godsol films, but he may make this picture for Griffith before he starts on his own productions.

STATE CATCHES OVER 100 RATS DAILY

Official Trapper Warns Boston to Enforce Guards on Ship Hawsers

Rats! Rats! Rats! Rats!

And still more rats.

Hundreds of them and every last one a possible carrier of plague, the deadliest foe medical science has to fight, are being exterminated by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health co-operating with the City Health Department.

The average daily catch of the 400 traps the rat catchers are putting out is more than a hundred and the number is increasing all the time.

ONE RAT IS A MENACE.

So says H. C. Mosman, of the State Department, regarded as one of the most efficient rat catchers in the United States today.

"Mind you there is no need for being alarmed. The situation is well in hand, and the work of exterminating the rodents in Boston and vicinity is going forward steadily. But there is always the need for precaution and the preventive measures.

"In Boston we have a gang of men at work along the water front, utilizing the $5,000 appropriation made last year by the Legislature for the work. It is not enough from our point of view, for so long as a single infected plague rat is loose in the city there is danger of an epidemic.

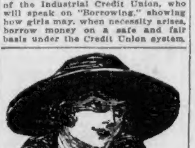
URGE SHIP RAT GUARDS.

"One thing the city should insist upon, however, that is being more or less laxly attended to at this time, is the use of rat guards on all ships tied up at any Boston wharf. Just the other day we took more than 100 rats from the supposedly rat-proof Commonwealth pier. They were the Muss Rattus and the Muss Alexandrinous, the two varieties of rats which most commonly bear the germs of bubonic plague. They came from some ship undoubtedly, and the city authorities should insist that no vessel be allowed to stretch a hawser from her side to the shore, or run out a gang plank without making use of the rat guards. It is the cheapest kind of health insurance I know of."

The rat campaign is to be spread to other parts of the city soon, as well .as to other seaport cit es of well as to other seaport cities of sioner Kelley having asked the Legislature for the funds needed for carrying on the work.

GIRLS' CITY CLUB TO HEAR TALKS ON SAVING

A series of talks by experts, intended to instruct members of the Girls' City Club in the best methods of using their incomes to advantage and informing them on sound principles of saving, is to be given at the clubhouse, No. 8 Newbury street, during March. At the request of the club, the Association for the Promotion and Protection of Savings has aranged for the following speakers: March 10, Miss S. Agnes Donham, executive secretary of the education department of the Association, on "Spending by Plan," in which she will show how a budget can help a girl to dress well and live well on a moderate income; March 24, Joseph H. Soliday, president of the Franklin Savings Bank, on "Saving by Plan," pointing out the many benefits of regular and systematic savings, especially for girls on small salaries; March 31, Mrs. Croline C. Anthony, treasurer of the Industrial Credit Union, who will speak on "Borrowing," showing how girls may, when necessity arises, borrow money on a safe and fair basis under the Credit Union system.



A WOMAN WITH A PRETTY COMPLEXION

Always appears charming.

If you have a clear, smooth, velvety skin, free of pimples and other unsightly blemishes such as blackheads, pimples, freckles, liver spots, you need never fear the impression you make on all you meet. Your complexion makes or mars your personality.

Some women are endowed by nature with a clear, smooth skin; others not so fortunate can acquire this beauty by the use of the popular Black and White Beauty treatment, consisting of Black and White Ointment and Soap. Go to your drug or department store and buy a 25c package of Black and White Ointment and Black and White Soap. Within each package are full directions as to the methods of use which will give you the best results. Black and White Beauty Treatment is easy to use, not requiring tedious hours of application.

Send 10c and this clipping to Black and White Box 1507, Memphis, Tenn., and receive samples of Black and White Ointment, Soap, Face Powder and Talcum.

Gives 33 Ounces of Blood to Brother

Thirty-three ounces of blood, given by Albert J. Kehoe of No. 446 East Eighth street, South Boston, saved the life of his brother, Edward J. Kehoe, who had cut his throat with a razor.

The transfusion was accomplished by Dr. William E. Browne of No. 387 Beacon street, chief operating surgeon at the Carney Hospital, where the wounded man was taken.

Dr. Browne also inserted a silver tube into the windpipe of Edward Kehoe and sewed up the severed tissues. It was stated that unless complications set in during the next four days the injured man would survive.

BUILDING CONFERENCE HELD AT LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Feb. 28.—In effort to settle a labor difficulty involving over 3,000 building mechanics in this city, committees from the Master Builders' Association and the Union of Building Tradesmen met at the Chamber of Commerce rooms here today. The union men declare they will refuse to accept a wage cut schedule to go into effect tomorrow of 20 per cent. They contend that contracts with the Master Builders in some instances are being repudiated.

EXTENSION OF STRIKE IN POLAND THREATENED

London, Feb. 28.—According to a Daily Express dispatch from Warsaw, the extension of the railway strike and a general strike in sympathy have been arranged for Monday. Two Socialist newspapers have been suppressed by the Polish government for publishing a strike notice.

77 SUSPECTED TYPHUS SPREADERS ARE HELD

New York, Feb. 28.—Of more than 2,300 immigrants examined for typhus at Ellis Island Immigration Station seventy-seven were held as possible typhus spreaders and sent back to the station. This is the largest number of persons examined since the crusade against the disease started.

F. I. F. TO HEAR BISHOP SPEAK AT BANQUET

Gallagher Will Deal With the Irish Cause From De Valera's Standpoint

Bishop Michael J. Gallagher of Detroit, national chaplain of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, will be among the speakers at the banquet of the State Council of the Friends of Irish Freedom in Hotel Westminster, Copley square, Thursday evening, March 17, commemorating the anniversary of the birth of St. Patrick.

Bishop Gallagher has chosen for his subject the "Friends of Irish Freedom." He was in close touch with the work of President Eamon DeValera of the Irish republic while the latter was in America and his talk will deal with the Irish cause from the standpoint of DeValera and other Sinn Fein leaders.

Mrs. Mary Reynaud, secretary of the council, announces that reservations for the banquet may be made by communicating with her at No. 104 Proctor avenue, Revere.

Delegates from subordinate branches met at the United States Hotel and listened to a report from President Daniel J. Moran of Lynn, who presided, dealing with the proposed drive to be launched for new members. Matthew J. Cummings announced that the recent meeting of the national officers in New York was the most enthusiastic he's attended for some time.

TOWN ELECTION AT STOW MARKED BY NO CONTESTS

The annual election of the little town of Stow, which was postponed from last Monday on account of the snowstorm, was held today. There were no contests on the ballot.

4 Wettest Cities Now Dry, Says Kramer

Washington, Feb. 28.—The illicit liquor traffic has sustained a death blow in the four worst spots in America — New York, Chicago, Toledo and Washington, during the past few weeks, according to Prohibition Commissioner Kramer.

Hundreds of bootleggers have been arrested during the final clean up.

"My successor," said Mr. Kramer, "whoever he is, will find the illicit liquor industry reduced to a minimum. At points distant from the Canadian and Mexican border it is practically impossible to procure liquor at any price."

WORKERS DIVIDE $1,153,046 BONUS MONEY

22,964 General Electric Workers Get 5 P. C. of Six Months' Earnings

Schenectady, N. Y., Feb. 28.—The General Electric Company announced today the payment of a total of $1,153,046.01 in supplementary compensation to the employes of its various plants who have been with the company five years or more. The sum represents five per cent. of the earnings for the six months' period ended December 1 last.

Nearly one half of the amount was paid to the employes of the plant here, a total of $537,941.84 being paid here to 10,500 workers. The total number of five-year or over employes who received the special compensation was 22,984, part being paid in cash and the remainder in investment bonds bearing seven per cent.

MEXICO REVOLT PLOT HATCHED IN TEXAS

Former Carranza General Is Seized and Important Documents Confiscated

Mexico City, Feb. 28.—The Mexican government learned five months ago of a revolutionary conspiracy hatched by Carranzistas with headquarters said to be in San Antonio, Tex., it was announced today.

The announcement was made following the arrest of Carlos Tejada, former Carranza general, and the seizing of important documents in the houses of other suspected generals.

According to the announcement uprisings had been planned in Oaxaca, Guerrero, Tampico, Vera Cruz and Michoacan.

The government troops are pursuing three generals with troops who revolted in Michoacan. General Humberto Villela, member of Congress in the Carranza administration, who revolted and was captured a few weeks ago with several officers and thirty-six soldiers, has been executed.

JOY RIDERS BURN STOLEN AUTOMOBILE

Lawrence, Feb. 28.—Auto joy riders operating in this city twice within the past few days have burned the automobiles they appropriated before abandoning them. Firemen at Engine 3 house were called to the region of Memorial Park, a lonely section of South Lawrence, to extinguish a fire which had enveloped an abandoned machine which was later proved to be the property of Joseph Crabtree of this city. The owner had been attending a performance at a local theatre when the malicious joyriders made off with his property.

Try These Fruit Meats in a luscious pie

Just bake one pie according to the recipe below. Fill with plump, tender, juicy Sun-Maid Raisins. Bake so the juice forms a luscious sauce.

You'll be delighted, and so will your men folks. You'll serve it frequently because this pie is far too good to miss. Bake it yourself or get it from any first-class bakery.

Rich in nutriment

It's a man's prime dessert—full of energizing nourishment to brace him after a hard day. Its pure fruit sugar is practically pre-digested fuel.

And raisins contain organic iron, in assimilable form, which brings the rose tint to women's and children's cheeks.

So raisins promote beauty as well as health.

Stocks Irregular in New York; Call Money Opens at 7%; Foreign Exchange Rates Steady

READING KEPT UNDER BEAR PRESSURE

Equipments Become Strong; Lorillard Advances 10 Points to High for Year

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon, prices being about midway between lowest and highest forenoon levels. Tobaccos remained strong, however. Lorillard advanced ten points to a high for the year. Equipments also developed strength, led by Baldwin and American Locomotive.

Reading remained under bear pressure, but was off only a trifle at noon and a point at its lowest. In some quarters it is asserted that the short interest is now the largest in the history of the stock exchange. The reserve ratio of the Federal Reserve system again fell below 50 last week, being 49.5 as compared with 50.3 seven days before.

Call money opened at 7 per cent. Foreign exchange was steady, demand sterling opening unchanged at $3.86⅛. Trading in stocks was of moderate volume, first hour transactions aggregating 134,000.

The market has a mixed start but most of the active issues made small gains on initial sales. But the improvement was brief and followed by an easing off process which lasted until it was found that stocks were not plentiful. At the end of an hour prices were around the opening level. Tobaccos were a strong group, and rails ruled higher. [illegible] lar at the start and made gains, but the reverse was the case [illegible] Tires sought a lower level. Steels were indefinite in trend. Sugars and coppers were not in evidence. [illegible] issues receded. International Paper was the only active specialty and it advanced a little. U. S. Steel sold ex-dividend and a fraction lower. Crucible was the strongest steel. The price range was very narrow during the first hour, less than a dozen issues showing a point change. There was a marked diminuition in selling orders from Southern Winter resorts. Bear plungers are now leaving Palm Beach. Reading was a weak carrier and also the most active one.

LESS FOREIGN TRADE.

Not only is domestic trade in a torpid condition, but export business is diminishing. In January exports decreased $87,000,000 as compared with the corresponding month of 1920, while the import shrinkage was $285,000,000. Foreigners are in great need of this country's products but cannot finance purchases. On the other hand, America is overstocked. It has almost as great a cotton as copper surplus. A month ago it had 11,323,713 bales as compared with a four-year average of 8,622,085. The demand for lumber is so limited it is said to be selling below production cost. The same statement is made concerning many materials.

MONEY IS SCARCE.

Although it is said that the money situation is better there is still a world-wide scarcity of funds. Europe is feeling this more than this country. In London last week the short term discount rate was 7¼ per cent., the highest since the Baring panic of 1890. In the United States there is not much hope of easier money for months. Government demands will be insistent and individual requirements are large. Credit liquidation is far from being finished. According to a New York statement between $50,000,000 and $75,000,000 is "tied up in distressed loans." Bank deposits are decreasing. Those of one big New York institution are $75,000,000 less than six months ago. Income tax payments on the middle of next month will be a big drain.

Wall Street Briefs

Present crop production by the Cuba Cane Sugar Corporation already exceeds $1,000,000 bags.

According to a Montreal dispatch the sale by the Abitibi Power Paper Co., Ltd., of $4,000,000 bonds sent the common stock up 4 to 87½.

Since October 15 last American Sumatra Tobacco common stockholders have increased in number over 50 per cent. to a total of more than 2,700. On the first of this month the average holding was fifty-three shares.

During December American refiners produced 464,580,000 gallons of gasoline, a daily average of 14,980,431 gallons or 107,000 less a day than in November.

This country's fuel and gas oil exports in 1920 were 827,594,000 gallons, compared with 684,850,000 gallons in 1919, and 1,200,750,000 in 1918.

During the first ten days of this month imports of gold into the United States totaled $9,858,526, while exports were $384,249, according to figures by the Federal Reserve Board.

Cotton Market

New York, Feb. 28.—Weak Liverpool cables were mainly responsible for renewed heavy general liquidation at the opening of the cotton market, under which first prices showed a decline of 21 to 50 points. Liverpool and Japanese interests were large sellers and local and Wall Street interests which had made purchases last week on the theory that the Liverpool market had seen its worst depression liquidated their lines this morning. The South was a small seller. Shorts furnished the bulk of the demand, but this buying was insufficient to materially rally prices. Opening prices were: March 11.30, May 11.82, July 12.20, October 12.70.

Copper Price Questioned

In some quarters the statement that spot copper has been offered recently as low as 12½ cents a pound is questioned. It is said: "Leading authorities insist they have no information as to who is willing to shade prices to this low level. It is possible to place orders with some interests for delivery up to the end of March at 12¾ cents and that figure is considered the regular market price."

Wool Shipments From Boston

Wool shipments from Boston from the first of the year to February 24, inclusive, totalled 18,426,300 pounds as compared with 22,450,500 for the corresponding 1920 period. Receipts were 40,517,516 against 35,879,376.

PRICES OFF IN DULL BOSTON MARKET

Heavy Tone to Local Trading During Forenoon; Curb Weak and Listless

The Boston market was quiet, featureless and irregular during the morning. The price range was as narrow as trading. Coppers were very quiet and showed small changes. Packing issues had a heavy tone and there was no early trading in rails. United Fruit advanced a fraction on a few sales. Point gains were made by U. S. Smelting and American Woolen preferred during the first hour and Edison declined a point and a half. Carson Hill was a comparatively active issue, while there was a little more than usual business in National Leather and American Telephone.

Fractionally higher stocks included Calumet & Arizona, Massachusetts Gas, United Fruit, Ventura, Carson Hill and Greenfield Tap. Among stocks to show small losses were Copper Range, Agricultural Chemical, Loew's Inc., Swift & Co., Swift International and Waldorf.

CURB PRICES LOWER.

The Curb was weak this morning, opening listlessly and remaining turgid subsequently. It was devoid of any feature. The most active stocks at the outset were Boston & Montana and Ophir. Issues to make gains on initial sales were Daddy, Eureka, Mutual and Verde Mines. Among those to recede a little were Alpha, Allied Oil, Allied Mining, Boston & Montana, Victoria, Ophir and Majestic.

At the end of an hour Ophir was up 2 cents at 60 cents. Bagdad was off 2 cents at 16 cents and Palisade 1 cent at 11 cents. Boston & Montana had recovered its loss.

METROPOLITAN LIFE BROKE ALL RECORDS

The annual report of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for 1920 shows new business broke all previous records in the world. The amount placed in the United States and Canada was $1,651,950,151 which is a gain of more than $250,000,000, as compared with the previous year.

The income and assets increased proportionately, the income for the year being $263,519,779, and the assets making a gain of $116,019,262 for a total of $950,913,087. Dividends have been declared, payable to policy-holders in 1921, amounting to $10,819,369, of which $6,961,261 is to holders of industrial policies.

The number of policies outstanding at the end of the year was 23,899,997, or about one for every five of the population. The number increased in 1920 by 2,129,326.

Claims were paid on 312,689 policies, an average of one every twenty-eight seconds for each business day of eight hours. The amount paid to policy-holders in claims, matured endowments, dividends, etc., was $81,257,393, or an average of $556.86 a minute for every business day of eight hours. Group insurance amounted to $214,547,572.

The company had invested at the end of the year in bonds and mortgages $357,703,045. In 1920 the company loaned and agreed to loan $85,000,000, mostly for housing.

Metropolitan nurses made 1,639,938 free visits to policy-holders, and Metropolitan agents engaged in a health campaign through the distribution of literature to policy-holders to the extent of 18,000,000 pieces.

Cotton Average Curtailment

It is said in New York that if present plans are executed the world's cotton acreage will be curtailed 50 per cent. next season. American planters expect a decreased acreage of 20 per cent. to 25 per cent. The Egyptian acreage has been reduced 66 per cent., and a substantial cut has been made in the East Indies.

Canada's Trade Decreases

There was a falling off in Canada's trade in January, the foreign commerce of the Dominion diminishing 31 per cent., as compared with the first month of 1920. Exports and imports for the month totaled $56,000,000 less. Exports were $80,912,816, compared with $117,948,647 a year ago; imports $72,252,223, as against $103,579,349 in January, 1920.

Rail Force Reductions

Since September last railroads have laid off approximately 289,000 employes. The majority were in railway shops. On March 1 last year, when roads were returned to private control, the payroll army exceeded that of December 31 last by about 261,000.

No U. S. Steel Price Cut

The rumor that the U. S. Steel Corporation had called a meeting of its salesmen or other representatives to consider price cutting is denied by Judge Gary, chairman of the board.

Man Dying on Street

John F. McGlone, fifty-six years old, collapsed on Charter street and was dead when physicians were called. His body, at North Morgue, was later identified by a former landlady on Columbus avenue. He had recently roomed at No. 2 Smith court.

EXPECT COPPER PAYMENTS TO BE PASSED

Utah, However, Is Expected to Continue Distributions at Reduced Rates

By BROADAN WALL
Registered U. S. Patent Office

New York, Feb. 28.—While speculation in the railroads and steel shares is expected to be restricted pending the settlement of the controversies being waged relative to wages and prices of steel, Wall Street is beginning to look for a more active and broader market in the stocks of the coal carrying roads and the coal companies which will be brought into existence as a result of the segregation plans now being considered.

Up to within recent years Philadelphia has been the home of the coal-carrying railroads. The stocks were introduced in that market at their inception, but one by one, much to the chagrin of the Philadelphia bankers and brokers, the issues were gradually drawn over to the New York Stock Exchange.

The debut of the new coal company stocks to result from the segregation plans now being formulated will be made in New York, if the plans of the local bankers and brokers do not go astray. These issues will also result in the establishment of a new group on the floor of the stock exchange, inasmuch as there are practically no coal producing company shares now listed.

Failure of the market for copper metal to show improvement as a result of the financial plan which segregated for export 400,000,000 pounds of metal leads the financial district to look for further reductions in the distributions to shareholders of copper companies. Some of the payments are expected to be passed. The Utah Copper, however, is expected to continue distributions, but at a reduced rate.

Bankers expect money rates to remain firm. Foreign countries continue to draw on the United States for funds. This is being done in two ways. One is through the flotation of securities and the other by way of credits created in financing excess foreign purchases in the United States.

COTTON GOODS BUYING IS MORE CONSERVATIVE

In its current summary of the cotton industry, the Merchants' National Bank says the improvement which came early in January was of short duration and that in the latter part of that month and in February cloth and yarn buyers operated much more conservatively. Under the influence of the decline in raw cotton yarn and fabric prices eased off. It says in part:

Declining Steel Prices

During the current week the average price of eight principal iron and steel products, as quoted by Iron Age, declined to $59.98, as compared with $61.72 a week before and $64.86 a month ago. The present average shows a decline of over 7½ per cent. in the past month. From the high 1920 average of 85.03, the current level shows a decline of approximately 29 per cent., while over the August 1913, average, a typical pre-war level, the current figure shows an advance of about 45 per cent.

Arena Schedule.

Tonight—Newton High vs. Melrose High; Cambridge Latin vs. Arlington High.

Thursday—B. A. A. vs. La Tuque of Canada.

Friday—Melrose High vs. Cambridge Latin.

Saturday—La Tuque vs. Boston All Stars.

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Double-headers tonight and Friday night between the four teams which are fighting it out for the Greater Boston high school hockey championship, and the appearance on Thursday and Saturday night of the brilliant La Tuque Quebec sextet in games, respectively with the B. A. A. and an All-Harvard team comprise the week's bill of fare for local hockey fans.

There is a possibility—such possibility depending on a complete change of attitude on the part of Raynor Skilton—that the Shoe Trades team may be reinstated before the week is out and another game in which it will be one of the contesting teams arranged as an added number to this week's Arena events.

Members of the Shoe Trades club are said to be complaining at the prospect of being prohibited from play during the remainder of the season, and an effort may be inaugurated by several of their number to gain permission from the U. S. A. H. A. to play with the All-Star team which is to engage La Tuque on Saturday night.

Sons of Ireland Men With La Tuque Team

That the La Tuque team is the equal of either the St. Patricks of Ottawa or the Aura Lees of Toronto is the contention of several local hockey followers who have seen the Quebec team in action and as the latter boasts in its line-up George McNaughton and Sammy Hughes who were seen here before the war, as members of the champion Sons of Ireland team there is reason to believe this week's Canadian visitors will give Boston fandom all the thrills that featured the work of previous teams from across the border.

Winners Clash in School Games Tonight

Newton High and Melrose High the two sevens which won their opening clashes in the final round for the High School championship are opponents in the opening game of tonight's double header and the winner of that clash will have an excellent chance to gain the title. Cambridge Latin is the favorite over Arlington High in the second contest of the evening and should Melrose win the first game and Cambridge Latin the second their battle on Friday night will be one worth going miles to see.

Asks That Western Teams Play First

Tom Kanaly manager of the B. A. A. hockey team, Eastern Division champion in the U. S. A. H. A. has suggested that the National championship schedule between Cleveland, Eveleth and the B. A. A. be so arranged that the two Western teams play first and the winner of that series come East and play the B. A. A. for the title. Whether this suggestion meets with the approval of the officials of the U. S. A. H. A. probably will be learned this week.

AULT CANDIDATE FOR NAVY FIVE CAPTAINCY

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28—Midshipman William B. Ault of Oregon, centre on the Naval Academy's basketball team which defeated the Army five Saturday, is practically certain to be named captain for next season. He is the only member of the team who will be a first-class man next year.

Watters, captain and left guard, and Byerley, left forward, will graduate in June. Parr, right guard, has two more years at the academy, and McKee, left forward, has three more.

DOYLE MAY WIN TITLE FROM SIEGAL

Welterweights Meet at Triple A Tomorrow Night; Former in Top Form Right Now

By JACK CONWAY.

There may be a new ring champion tomorrow night by the time the barkeeps brushed off the mahogany for the last time in the days before the camel started its shimmy stunt across the country.

Paul Doyle is the young man who stands an excellent chance of being able to parade up and down Hanover street wearing a pugilistic crown. Maybe friend reader is asking himself why Doyle should select Hanover street for his parade ground. 'Tis because Doyle is an Italian and only adopted his present name for ring purposes.

Now that Johnny Dundee is slipping Doyle believes it is up to him to grab a little fresh glory for the Italian race. Anybody who is acquainted with Tony Palazzolo's protege realizes that Siegal is very liable to receive a bumping at the Triple A's show.

Doyle Now Fighting Better Than Ever

During the past two months Doyle has been fighting better than at any time during his brilliant career. When he found it impossible to secure opponents in New England, he hopped over to Big Broadway and sought ring action. He first battled Louis Bogash to a draw and then stepped forth and won over George Ward and Barney Adair.

Doyle showed enough class in his New York bouts to cause Jack Britton to avoid a meeting with him.

Tony Palazzolo's steady walloper has always been rated high in the dear old game of fist and get away. Dan Morgan once told the writer that he considered Doyle the classiest welterweight in the country with the exception of Jack Britton.

Siegal Fully Awake to Bout's Importance

Siegal realizes the importance of tomorrow night's tussle and has prepared himself carefully for the fray. For the past week he has worked out daily at Scenic Temple and has displayed all of the aggressiveness and punching ability that has enabled him to forge his way to the head of his boxing division.

In the last start Siegal won over Paddy Flynn in eight rounds. Larry Conley contends that this proved that Nate has improved as a fighter as when he first collided with Flynn he was mighty fortunate to win a close decision.

Siegal plans to force the issue tomorrow night. He believes this style of campaign will offset Doyle's ability as a boxer and enable him to pile up enough points to win.

Marcel Thomas to Battle Nate Siegal

Marcel Thomas, welterweight [illegible] of France, will make his bow to Boston society when he collides with Nate Siegal in a ten-round bout at the big charity show at Symphony Hall Thursday night. Thomas has been an active ring campaigner and expects to make things interesting for Siegal. The latter apparently isn't worrying a great deal about the Frenchman inasmuch as he is booked to meet Paul Doyle at the Armory Club tomorrow night and is also planning to sign for a match for Saturday at one of the out-of-town clubs. Confidence has always been one of Nate's big assets.

TAD'S TIDBITS

They Don't Wanna Play in Fred's Yard.

It does seem rather strange that the big boys bar Fred Fulton when talking of fights.

Managers of heavies tell you that their man is better than old John L., that he is the scrappiest thing that ever donned a pair of trunks, and add that Dempsey would be a setup for him.

They carefully avoid mentioning the name of Tall Freddie the plasterer, and if they do crack about him they usually say that he is a faker or a quitter or that he won't draw.

Like a number of others, we still think that Fulton is a great fighter. Tom O'Rourke, his manager, thinks so, too. Pipe Tom's note here below.

DEAR TAD: Note what you had to say about our old Irish gladiator, Peter Maher, and his K. O. record.

Fulton has had seventy-five fights without any slips; has scored 61 two K. O.'s and won two bouts on fouls. He had eighteen no decision bouts. He was K. O.'d three times, once by Al Palzer, once by Jack Dempsey and once by Harry Wills.

Who has a better record than Fulton? He bars nobody and picks no soft ones. First come, first served.

Is it not up to Dempsey, Wills and Brennan to box Fulton?

Sincerely, TOM O'ROURKE.

Here's the Ounce of Prevention

Tommy Simpson, the California promoter, is in town with Jimmy Duffy, a lightweight, and Battling Ortega, the middleweight who beat both Ted Lewis and Marty Farrel out West.

Tommy has been showing Ortega the sights every day. He noticed that Bat always wore an old hat on his strolls.

"Why don't you get out that new Kelly and put it on while you're walking around town, Bat?" he said to Bat. "Doll up a bit. You'll never wear it out leaving it at home."

Ortega looked at Simpson and with a simple smile piped:

"Tommy, you have no sense at all. Don't you read the papers? Why, most every day some one is knocked off by a brick or a hammer that falls from one of these skyscrapers they're putting up. There's one on every block at least. You can't tell when a brick is gonna bounce off your dome. Why don't you wear an OLD HAT, TOO?"

HOW COME

By GILL.

EVER since Twin Sullivan showed his heels to a couple of his younger rivals in the ring all kinds of arguments have sprung up regarding the old timer.

The latest is "Who was the handsomest man in the ring?" Of course every fan will have his own choice but few can deny that "Gentleman Jim" Corbett was some sweel when he was performing and he is still free from any marks of his many tough ring battles.

JOE THOMAS, whose sensational battles with Stanley Ketchel marked him as one of the wonders of the ring, is a close second to the conqueror of John L., and many rank the Providence boy as the best set up of all the past or present stars of the ring.

JIMMY BRITT, Kid McCoy and Jack McAuliffe can also be classed among the beaux of the roped arena. Among the present day boxers our own Eddie Shevlin would probably carry off the palm at a boxers beauty show.

WORD comes from abroad that a movement is on foot to put the kibosh on the plans to stage the Dempsey-Carpentier bout in England. J. T. Hulls for many years connected with the famous Sporting Life of London is reported as saying that there is no more chance of pulling off the affair in England than a snowball has in a well known resort of frightfully high temperature.

LEST we forget—The combination Tuohey-Daro wrestling match tonight recalls our little editorial suggesting a merger of some weeks ago when the then deadly rivals declared no such thing can ever be, and now they're 50-50 on everything.

Nat Butler, the famous old bike rider who can crack a smile on a rainy Wednesday night when he has a big card of races scheduled, has a new one. Nat's favorite Winter sport is financing the bike boys and this accounts for the following. One of his stars is riding in Europe and has been going big. Nat just got a cable from him saying: "Resilience rushing, going great, sending [illegible] another hundred." And N. B. is still wondering.

CHAPTER XIII.—Continued

"BUT don't you see—"

"I'm going up now. Be down directly."

"Do they—have they—I was just wondering if they asked about me any."

She paused in the doorway, looked back at him.

"The office is a pretty busy place, Hugh."

"Yes—of course."

"I'm not sure it's the place for you."

"But—"

"I mean just this. You're wasted there. The News isn't an organ of public opinion and literary power. It's a business enterprise. Take your MacIntyre [illegible] piece of writing that's ever been printed in the paper."

"Oh, do you really [illegible]"

"Yes. But [illegible] it. Oh, I do. And Hitt does. A few. Frank Winterbeck did—does. He's got brains. Some character, even. But the paper has [illegible] ter. MacIntyre's a crook. The town's rotten. We've got a chance, there on the News, for real leadership—moral, civic. But do you think we'll take it? Hardly!"

Marg'e was near forgetting herself. Conviction rang in her voice, her eyes snapped.

She hurried out.

But her earnestness had brought her closer to Calverly than her schemes ever could have. He seemed to enjoy their little supper together. And she was quick to seize the small opportunity. She kept herself quiet and friendly. For the time he even stopped worrying about the paper. At least he talked more impersonally than he had at all before.

The next morning, when she let herself in, she was surprised to find him up and dressed.

"I'm all right," he explained, a thought defiantly. "Silly to be staying here, babying myself. I—I can't tell you how kind you've been. But . . ."

"It won't hurt you to try a little walk."

"I'm going to the office."

"That's impossible!"

"No, really . . ."

"Try it around the block once. You'll be surprised to find how weak you are."

He stood over her, spread his hands. She glanced up at him, then away. She found him deeply attractive. But it wouldn't do to show it. It never did.

"It doesn't matter particularly how weak I am," he was saying. "Surely you see that I can't—well, go on like this."

His thin hands were moving to include the little apartment, her apartment.

"Anyway," she remarked, "we need some breakfast."

While she busied herself about this, he walked the floor. His look was that of a man who fights himself, struggles to rouse himself.

She found some difficulty in making talk over the breakfast. The very intimacy of their surroundings weighed on both. At the end of the meal she found herself no nearer a plan for handling him.

He looked about the room; prowled in the little hall.

"What is it?" she called, quickly, nervously.

"I was looking for my hat. Perhaps it's upstairs."

"It is. I'll get it."

He put out a hand to detain her; but she pressed by him.

"Just once around the block," she commanded as she gave it to him.

He came back into the living-room then; sat on the arm of the Morris chair; looked down at the floor for a time, then, with unexpected frankness, up at her.

"I've got to go to the office," he said. "Can't you see, Margie? You're so good—you're wonderful—but I've got to."

"I simply won't let you."

"I'm sorry. Perhaps it isn't sensible. But it's all I've got—work. It's the only thing. I've got to go."

"Then," said she.

"What?" He, too, was quick, nervous.

"Well—it had to come, soon or later. . . ."

"What? What is it?"

She went to the bureau in the bedroom.

He started up in apprehension. He had to lean on the table.

She spread out there the News of a week earlier.

"What? I don't see what you mean!"

"The box, there. The retraction."

He read it. He seemed slow, even stupid, with it.

"Well," said she, in as matter-of-fact a voice as she could manage, "there it is. You've got to know it." We'll talk it over. It needn't be so terribly serious, with all the talent you've got."

She wished he would move.

"Sit down," she said again. But he was still leaning on the table. He must have read the statement through several times. Now, by the way, his eyes shifted, she could see that he was beginning it again.

But finally he lifted his head.

"It's me, of course—my story," he said.

"Yes. It's you."

"I'm discharged—publicly, that way."

"Oh, but you know," he said—"after this. . . ."

"But there are other offices."

He [illegible] after [illegible] there!

"Yes, there are other offices." Then he looked about the room and drew a hand across his eyes. "But all this—the nurse, and the doctor, and the food and all—"

"Please!"

"I can't help it. You see—I'd used all my money."

He [illegible] again [illegible] the arm of the Morris chair.

[illegible] all I'm [illegible] to."

"Of course [illegible] it wasn't [illegible] what's that, at [illegible] the important thing now."

She was trying to hold herself to [illegible] manner. But it was d [illegible]

"You're taking it hard, Hugh. I [illegible] to get you well. No [illegible] got to do that first. This is just a problem. Get your feet back on the ground, and you'll handle it. [illegible] let me."

Now was her moment. She kept her voice under control, but her color would rise, and her eyes were [illegible] money. I've got some, a few hundred. I'm independent. Nobody can keep me from doing as I like. Let me help you. Let's work it out [illegible] to make demands. . . ."

He was getting up.

Her hand trailed rather awkwardly from his shoulder down his sleeve and caught there, as she followed him.

He fumbled at the knob of the outer door.

"Don't look like that," she said [illegible]

But he had the door open now.

She could have thrown her arms around his neck; but not here in the corridor. She lowered her voice.

"You mustn't go like this, Henry!"

But he broke away and walked swiftly along the dim corridor and down the stairs.

[illegible] turned [illegible]

[illegible] face [illegible] familiar [illegible]

"Sorry, Marge." He removed the cigar.

White of face, cold of eye, she looked him up and down.

"Spying!" she said.

"No, Marge, not spying. Looking for the bell. [illegible] Then I heard you, and—well, I stepped aside. It was a little surprising."

They stood there. He chewed his cigar.

"Wanted to catch you before you got down to the paper," he added. Then, "Well, I caught you."

She drew him into her own hallway and [illegible]

[illegible]

"Come in," she said then. "He is Henry Calverly."

"No"—

"Yes. It isn't what you think. I am interested in him."

"Well, naturally—"

"Please don't be ugly!"

He spread his hands.

"I see it's no use trying to talk with you, Abe."

"I'll go, Marge. We used to say, if a change came we'd be frank about it."

"It isn't that sort of a change."

He turned away, but not before she caught the twist in his usually placid mouth.

"Perhaps we'd better not try to talk now," she said.

"Perhaps we'd better not," said he.

"He doesn't think I know who he is, Abe."

"But you called him—"

"He doesn't know what I called him. He's beside himself, Abe. It's pretty serious. If you don't mind, I'll slip out first. I'm sorry—sorry you won't—or can't—see this as it is. At least, you may as well help me keep his secret."

"Marge," he said, coldly deliberate, "you're lying to me."

"Oh, Abe, don't—"

His voice was rising. "You're in love with him. It's an affair. You're—"

"Well, say I am! I can't help it, can I? You don't expect me to—"

"But, my God, Marge—"

This wouldn't do. He was catching at her with both hands.

She eluded him and hurried away.

When Abel Timothy walked over toward Cantey square, a few minutes later, he saw Margie on a corner gazing anxiously [illegible] and [illegible]

As a Woman Thinketh

BY HELEN ROWLAND

Copyright, 1921, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

SHE is very young—just eighteen!

(As though every normal, feminine thing didn't want to know THAT!)

The boys do not "fall for" her, she writes.

And when she [illegible] my favorite recipe, and [illegible] they always ask her if she "wants a [illegible] or something like that"

And what WOULD you say to a girl like that?

Why, simply this—

My dear,

There is an age at which every woman is at her most attractive.

With some it is at twenty, when youth and beauty and [illegible]

[illegible] LONGER [illegible] to let herself [illegible] pursued.

When it is fatal to be [illegible] or too [illegible] or too [illegible]

When the less you know, [illegible] you say, and the less you do, the more charming you are.

When FUN is a matter of life and death, beaux are a matter of chance, and love is a matter of accident!

And with another sort of woman, the blossom-time comes at thirty

When she has learned to be subtle, and elusive, and mysterious,

When she knows how to "wear clothes" effectively, and can startle the eye without putting it OUT

When she can flatter a man with a glance, or a [illegible] and can [illegible] without FRIGHTENING him to the [illegible]

When she can arrest his attention, arouse his curiosity, ensnare his senses, and burn incense to his vanity, without seeming to flutter an eyelash

When she can "put across" a pose without being ridiculous,

And when she is more fortunate to be chic and interesting,

Than to be merely pretty.

And, again, there is another sort of woman who is at her best at forty—

When a woman can DARE to be brilliant, to be trenchant, to be dashing [illegible]

[illegible]

When she holds the sceptre and wields the social [illegible]

When she can "mother" men, and thereby utterly disarm them

When she can pat them on the shoulder, feed them good dinners and coddle them without being suspected of matrimonial designs.

When she can be a pal or a guardian angel or a social mentor.

And it doesn't matter whether she is pretty or plain—

For she is the "Ageless Woman"!

And with some women—a very, very few—

The Charm lasts all their lives long!

But these are the "born sirens," who are blessed by the gods and kissed by the angels on their way to earth.

And sometimes prompted and inspired by the Devil, after they get here

Thank Heaven, they are very, VERY few!

For with most of us there is just ONE bright blossom time,

When we feel our power, and flower, and expand, in the sun of admiration and devotion,

And lift our faces to Heaven—for a little while!

And only time and intuition can tell any woman

How to charm a man!

Or WHEN to charm him!

For morning wear there are some unusual frocks in gingham, plaids, and blocks and tiny checks in reds, green, pumpkin and lavender combinations. White pique or linen are used as trimming, and it is surprising to note the steep figures some of these homely gowns assume.

But it is the sport clothes that are attracting so much favorable attention at this time. Cream, ivory and pure white rough silks are created into pleated skirts to accompany gay wool sweaters, or perhaps fashioned into a becoming one-piece frock. Norfolk suits, beautifully tailored, are well-liked for trotteur wear, and are smart when worn with the white satin sailor hats.

Gayly-colored sport silks find their way to country clubs, tennis courts, golf links and verandas, where the smart set assemble. Silks of all weaves are being used for outdoor wear, with Canton crepe in the lead. Scarlet and flame shades are much sought after, but orchid, pumpkin, jade, citron, raspberry, rose, turquoise and liberty blue are in close following. Sometimes, it is the sweater that will lend the colorful note and sometimes a bit of trimming on a cream silk that distinguishes one's costume.

Up to the Doctor

The other day a registrar received due notice of death, and, as he filled in various particulars, he asked: "When did she die?"

"Oh, she's to die the night at eleven."

On the storm of official wrath was poured the oil of explanation.

"Aweel, maister, that's what the doctor said, an' he kens best what he gied her."

CHAPTER XXVI.—Continued

"I DON'T know," she considered. "You are unlike any person I have ever known. It is curious that I cannot now even think of St. John's as a church. You have transformed it into something that seems new. I'm afraid I can't describe what I mean, but you have opened it up, let in the fresh air, rid it of the musty and deadening atmosphere which I have always associated with churches. I wanted to see you, before I went away," she went on steadily, "and when Eleanor mentioned that you were coming to her house tonight, I asked her to invite me. Do you think me shameless?"

The emphasis of his gesture was sufficient. He could not trust himself to speak.

"Writing seemed so unsatisfactory, after what you had done for me, and I never can express myself in writing. I seem to congeal."

"After what I have done for you!" he exclaimed. "What can I have done?"

"You have done more than you know," she answered, in a low voice. "More, I think, than I know. How are such things to be measured, put into words? You have effected some change in me which defies analysis, a change of attitude, —to attempt to dogmatize it would ruin [illegible] I prefer to leave it undefined—not even call it an acquisition of faith. I have faith," she said, simply, "in whatever is to come, and which has made you dare, superbly, to cast everything aside . . . It is that, more than anything you have said. What you are."

For the instant he lost control of himself.

"What you are," he replied. "Do you realize—can you ever realize what your faith in me has been to me?"

[illegible]

"I did not mean to say that you have [illegible] made things clear, which [illegible] were obscure, as I wrote you. You have convinced me that true belief, for instance, is the hardest thing in the world, the denial of practically all these people, who profess to believe, represent. The majority of them insist that humanity is not to be trusted. . . ."

They had reached, in an altered [illegible] the corner of Park street.

"When are you leaving?" he asked, in a voice that sounded harsh in his own ears.

"Come!" she said gently. "I'm not going in yet, for a while."

The park lay before them, an empty garden filled with chequered light and shadows under the moon. He followed her across the gravel, glistening with dew, past the statue of the bronze statesman with arm upraised, into pastoral stretches—a delectable country which was theirs alone. He did not take it in, save as one expression of the breathing woman at his side. He was but partly conscious of a direction he had not chosen. His blood throbbed violently and a feeling of actual physical faintness was upon him. He was being led, hopelessly, all volition gone, and the very idea of [illegible]

[illegible] because as though he could not bear the current of her touch, and yet the thought of its removal were less bearable. . . . For she had put her own hand out, not shyly, but with a movement so fraught with grace, so natural, that it was but the crowning bestowal.

"Alison!" he cried, "I can't ask it of you. I have no right."

"You're not asking it," she answered. "It is I who am asking it."

"But I have no future—I may be an outcast tomorrow. I have nothing to offer you." He spoke more firmly now, more commandingly.

"Don't you see, dear, that it is just because your future is obscure that I can do this? You never would have done it, I know—and I couldn't face that. Don't you understand that I am demanding the great sacrifice?"

"Sacrifice!" he repeated. His fingers turned, and closed convulsively on hers.

"Yes, sacrifice," she said gently. "Isn't it the braver thing?"

Still he failed to catch her meaning.

"Braver," she explained, with her wonderful courage, "braver if I love you, if I need you, if I cannot do without you."

He took her in his arms, crushing her to him in his strength, in one ineffable brief moment finding her lips, inhaling the faint perfume of her smooth skin. Her lithe figure lay passively against him in marvellous, unbelievable surrender.

"I see what you mean," he said, at length. "I should have been a coward. But I could not be sure that you loved me."

So near was her face that he could detect, even under the obscurity of the branches, a smile.

"And so I was reduced to this! I threw my pride to the winds," she whispered. "But I don't care. I was determined, selfishly, to happiness."

"And to give it," he added, bending down to her. The supreme quality of its essence was still to be doubted, a bright star-dust which dazzled him, to evaporate before his waking eyes. And, try as he would, he could not realize to the full depth the joy of contact with a being whom, by discipline, he had trained his mind to look upon as unattainable. They had spoken of the future, yet in these moments any consideration of it was blotted out. . . . It was only by degrees that he collected himself sufficiently to be able to return to it. . . . Alison took up the thread.

"Surely," she said, "sacrifice is useless unless it means something, unless it be a realization. It must be discriminating. And we should both of us have remained incomplete if we had not taken—this. You would always, I think, have been the one man for me—but we should have lost touch." He felt her tremble. "And I needed you. I have needed you all my life—one in whom I might have absolute faith. That is my faith, of which I could not tell you a while ago. Is it—sacrilegious?"

She looked up at him. He shook his head, thinking of his own. It seemed the very distillation of the divine.

"All my life," she went on, "I have been waiting for the one who would risk everything. Oh, if you had faltered the least little bit, I don't know what I should have done. That would have destroyed what was left of me, put out, I think, the flickering [illegible] that remained, instead [illegible] You can [illegible] I watched you, how I [illegible] it was prayer [illegible] And now because you don't falter, because you risked all this, you gained me. You have gained only what you yourself [illegible] more than I ever was, more than I ever expected to be."

She straightened up and gazed at him, taking one of his hands in her [illegible]

[illegible] It is the truth [illegible] women are [illegible] than men. I [illegible] nothing from you—[illegible] Women are crafty, you know. And suppose you [illegible] Ah, I do not mean failure—you cannot fail, now. You have put yourself forever beyond failure. But what I mean is, suppose you were compelled to leave St. John's, and I came to you then as I have come now, and begged to take my place beside you? I was afraid to risk it. I was afraid you could not take me, even now, tonight. Do you realize how austere you are at times, how you have frightened me?"

"That I should ever have done that!" he said.

"When I looked at you in the pulpit you seemed so far from me. I could scarcely bear it. As if I had to share it, you as if you had already gone to a place beyond, where [illegible] I could [illegible] go, where [illegible] never could. Oh, you will take me with you, now—you won't leave me behind."

To this cry every fibre of his soul responded. He had thought himself, in these minutes, to have known all feelings, all thrills, but now, as he gathered her to him again, he was to know still another, the most exquisite of all. That it was conferred upon him to give this woman [illegible] this consciousness was the most exquisite of all, transcending all conception of the love of woman. And the very fulness of her was beyond him. A lifetime were insufficient to exhaust her. . . .

"I wanted to come to you now, John. I want to share your failure, if it comes—all your failures. Because they will be victories—don't you see? I have never been able to achieve that kind of victory—real victory, by myself. I have always succumbed, taken the baser, the easier thing." Her cheek was wet. "I wasn't strong enough, by myself, and I never knew the stronger one. . . .

"See what my trust in you has been! I knew that you would not refuse me in spite of the fact that the world may misunderstand, may sneer at your taking me. I knew that you were big enough, even for that, when you understood it, coming from me. I wanted to be with you, now, that we might fight it out together."

"What have I done to deserve so priceless a thing?" he asked.

She smiled at him again, her lip trembling.

"Oh, I'm not priceless. I'm only real, I'm only human—human and tired. You are so strong, you can't know how tired. Have you any idea why I came out here, this Summer? It was because I was desperate—because I had almost decided to marry someone else."

She felt him start.

"I was afraid of it," he said.

"Were you? Did you think, did you wonder a little about me?" There was a vibrant note of triumph to which he reacted. She drew away from him a little. "Perhaps, when you know how sordid my life has been, you won't want me."

What Some of the New Books Are Saying

LD TRICKS TOLD BY HOUDINI

he wizard Houdini has written a k exposing wizardry. It was in- table. All wizards eventually te an expose—of the other man's ks. Houdini has not told us how escapes from shackles and an n-barred cage at the bottom of the rles River, nor from the strongest in modern prisons. But why uld he? His book, "Miracle ngers and Their Methods," pub- ed by E. P. Dutton & Co., is resting enough as it is to claim attention of those who, having n mystified by conjurers, want mysteries explained.

AT-RESISTING TRICKS.

oudini informs us that exposes of s of legerdemain are almost as as the magician's profession, but they only seem to whet the pub- appetite for other and more in- ate feats, without in the least rfering with the drawing power any clever magician who may present a new "bag of tricks" or, indeed, take some of the old ones out of the bag by a new method. He devotes a large part of his book to heat-resisting tricks, such as eating fire, walking on live coals, coming unscathed from furnaces and the like. He quotes the poets Johnson and Chaucer and a long list of antiquarians to show that these tricks are older than civilization, and that they have been exposed time after time without any loss of patronage to fire-eaters of succeeding generations. The public taste in the more highly civilized parts of the world has outgrown fire-resisting tricks, he tells us, but they are still popular in backward civilizations and barbarous lands.

A REAL FROG-EATER.

Sword swallowing and glass eating occupy considerable space in the book, although he tells us that these feats are not true legerdemain. The sword swallower really does swallow swords, a dozen of them at a time. The glass eater realy eats glass, although he disgorges it immediately afterward. This ability to empty the stomach without nausea is at the bottom of the whole "human ostrich" profession. There is, he writes, in Europe a public that delights in seeing men swallow live frogs. So men rise up to meet the demand. He tells an amusing story of a French frog swallower who gulped five frogs down his gullet at a performance, and could only raise four of them after the show. His chagrin in private at being compelled to digest a live frog was a marked contrast to the gusto with which he swallowed five in the presence of the audience.

CORNS

Lift Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly!

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

ve probably heard of this well- own plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

"Beth Buttercup" a Girls' Book

Once there was a little golden buttercup that had a wish, and the Fairy Queen heard the wish and granted it. The buttercup was turned into a little girl and she was given a mission. Carro Frances Warren tells all about it in "Beth Buttercup," published by David McKay. The story is in a language that little girls just out of the toddling stage can understand, and there are pictures to help out, many of them in color, drawn by H. Boylston Dummer. The volume is attractively arranged, in type so big that dear old grandma can read it without her glasses. To sprinkle a little nature study into the story, wherein crickets get broken legs and potato men give dances, and grasshoppers wear overalls just like country boys, there is a page of flower illustrations in color, showing all the species mentioned in the story, for bright-eyed little Mary to pick out and identify. Very useful and entertaining, but why, oh why, does the author throughout spell "lily" with three L's?

MAYNARD'S NEW BOOK OF VERSE

"He reins his horse and listens. The risen lark sings over
The edge of a cloud in a sky washed clean with dew.
This is the England he knew of springing grass and clover,
This is the England he knew."

The lines suggest those of Tennyson:

"He, like a lover, down through all his blood,
Drew in the dewy, meadowy, morning breath of England."

They are from a new volume of poems by Theodore Maynard, one of the younger English poets, whose works have become more or less widely known through magazine publications on both sides of the Atlantic. The volume is called "The Last Knight and Other Poems." That which gives title to the collection is as near mediocrity as the book contains; there are many finer and one of them is "St. George," from which the lines quoted are taken.

ELEMENT OF HUMOR.

The volume is unusual in several ways, not the least of them, its element of humor. There are religious verses, love songs, even songs of propaganda, as that which gives the book its title; but the poet more than once hymns both the Diety and his human loves with a whimsical gayety that sounds an unusual, if not wholly, new note in lyric writing.

The first poems, for instance, his "Laus Deo," is a toast:

"Praise for the joy and gladness Thou didst send
When I have sat in gracious fellowship
In twilight for an evening with a friend,
When wine and magic entered at the lip.
For laughter, which the fates can overthrow,
Thy mercy doth accord—
To Thee, who didst my godlike joy bestow,
I lift my glass, O Lord!"

THE INN LEFT BEHIND.

Some of our professional uplifters should look into this. It is not the only passage in which the poet sings a poem to the cup that cheers. In "The Heavenly Tavern," he even mourns an arid exile in our own land of the free, as indicated by the sub-title caption, "Sung by the Exile in America."

"But when I went sailing across the sea—
Alas! that Inn didn't travel with me.
I've left it and lost it . . . oh, where shall
I find
Any comfort of body or rapture of mind?"

It is difficult to conceive that the writer of these trivial lines is the same who penned "Desideravi," one of the most lovely and tender pieces in the volume, or in any other volume of modern verse.

"For my rough hand in touching spills Life from the rose."

It is no rough hand that fashions lines like these, and many others in the series. The poems are grouped into seven divisions, that called "Sonnets from an Unfinished Sequence" being perhaps the most sustained in poetic conceptions and high quality of craftsmanship.

The group called "Six Epitaphs" is good doggerel, the sort one finds written by clever folk in autograph albums and scrap books. They do not add particularly to the literary weight of the collection, but then, neither does the lighter verse of many an honored poet of the hearth and home. The book has many charms and is truly lyric in quality. It is published by Stokes.

NEW TRANSLATION OF DOSTOEVSKY

"The Friend of the Family" is added this Spring to the list of Dostoevsky's novels translated by Mrs. Garnett and published by Macmillan. Dostoevsky's American popularity came later than that of other Russians, but has been all the more keen for that reason. The most popular of his works in this country are "The Brothers Karamazov," "The Idiot," "Crime and Punishment."

SKATING STUNTS BY A CHAMPION

"A Guide to Artistic Skating," by George A. Meagher, the world's champion figure skater, is a comprehensive treatment of this popular art from the first steps to the most intricate feats, with designs and photographs. Especially fascinating are the figures for "pair skating," a sport which in England bids fair to rival all other Winter diversions in popularity. Published by Stokes.

WARTIME STRIKES AND THEIR CURE

E. P. Dutton & Co. have ready for immediate publication Alexander M. Bing's work on "Wartime Strikes and Their Adjustment," which will be a notable addition to the history of industrial developments during the past few years.

A HANDY BOOK FOR THE CAMPER

Horace Kephart's famous books, "Camping" and "Woodcraft," are to be issued in one convenient handbook, of a size that will fit in the camper's coat pocket. As separate volumes they have long been the favorite guides for all woodsmen. (Macmillan)

HOW RUSSIA PUT AWAY ITS CZAR

"Recollections of a Foreign Minister," a fragment of the memoirs of the late Alexander Iswolsky translated by Charles Louis Seeger and published by Doubleday, Page & Company, is an important addition to the recent history of the fallen Russian Empire. The book treats of the period between the Peace of Portsmouth and the cabinet of M. Stolypin, the period in which an attempt was made to establish a liberal government in Russia. Iswolsky was made minister of foreign affairs in Count Witte's cabinet, when the Duma was established, and remained in the cabinet of M. Goremykin who succeeded Witte. A final chapter deals with the personality and character of the later Czar Nicholas II.

SEE GERMANY'S HAND.

Those who see, or think they see, the finger of William II. of Germany in the lamentable foreign policies of the Russian Empire during the reign of Nicholas II. will find strong support in M. Iswolsky's memoirs. He writes that William's machinations induced Russia to mire down in the quicksands of the Far East, and that his influence over the late Czar was responsible for the infamous Bjorko treaty, which would have made Russia an enemy of France and a tool of Germany if Witte had not intervened and caused the Czar to abrogate the treaty.

Iswolsky's estimate of Count Witte is far less flattering than the popular estimate of that self-made statesman. While admitting that Witte was a man of unusual parts, longheaded and fore-sighted to an unusual degree, Iswolsky found him an inferior economist, fired with an overweaning selfish ambition, whose character did not always measure up to his great intellectual gifts.

CZAR'S CHARACTER VAGUE.

Iswolsky found it difficult to estimate the character of the late Czar Nicholas II. in exact terms. "His character was essentially vague and elusive, of nuances and half tones. The dominant trait seems to have been a feeble will, which prevented his undoubted qualities of heart and mind from asserting themselves with any effectiveness." He found Nicholas gifted and intelligent, but lacking in education and intellectual culture. His education was that of a cavalry lieutenant.

"The prodigious adventure of this unlettered, drunken and shameless peasant (Raspoutin), who left a remote village in Siberia to become the intimate, the counsellor, and, one may even say, the idol of the Russian imperial couple," Iswoldsky explains by Raspoutin's hypnotic faculties together with certain traits of Russian religious mysticism, difficult of comprehension for occidental minds. "The real importance of Raspoutin was to symbolize in the eyes of enlightened Russian people all that was odious in the autocratic regime, and his function, which might be likened to a chemical reagent, consisted in bringing together and uniting all the elements of Russian society that were adverse to autocracy."

There Never Was A Better Time to find a homey room than now, and there never was a better way than through the Room-to-Rent Columns of the Boston American.

Young people coming to Boston to study seem to have the knack of finding attractive rooms. Most of these students come from small towns in New England, and most of them selected their rooms before coming to Boston by reading the home paper of New England—the Boston Evening American.

LICE A WORLD MENACE

We have all heard a great deal about cooties, graybacks, pediculi-capitis, German lice and vestimenti and other sweet-scented names, but it is simply the same old unspeakable, clinging, pestiferous louse of olden times now a world menace, [illegible] the deadliest influence upon every living thing on earth. The British statisticians claim that the louse killed no less than 1,000,000 men on both sides and it is believed that in the little city of Jassy, and in the country round about, hundreds died every day from the disease with which the louse had infected them.

While the lice discovered lately seem to confine themselves principally to animals, it is a good thing to get rid of them quickly.

[illegible] Lice Powder can be obtained at all drug and department stores for 50c and 1.25 per can, or by mail for 5c and 10c extra. Eleven different powders for other pests. Name kind when ordering. All registered in Maine.

Your Money Used to Aid Russian Adventurers

Let us just see what the officials who have been giving away our public funds to foreigners have done to the American taxpayers.

And do not forget that YOU are an American taxpayer if you do anything to earn your living. Taxes can only come from production, and ALL producers and consumers are taxpayers in the long run, no matter whether they appear on the taxpayers' roll or not. So you have a vital interest in the methods of individuals who have been giving away our public money to other people.

Let us begin with the most flagrant misuse of the public funds, the gift of nearly two hundred million dollars to the so-called Russian Ambassador, Boris Bahkmeteff.

In March, 1917, the Czar was overthrown, and a temporary provisional government set up in Russia, headed by Alexander Kerensky, a weak, vain phrase-maker, with neither capacity nor courage to rule. In less than ten months he was a runaway fugitive and the rule of Russia passed into the hands of the Bolsheviki leaders.

Kerensky designated Boris Bahkmeteff as his Ambassador to the United States, and the Democratic administration, which was then throwing anything from a million to a billion into any foreign hat that was held out, promptly gave Mr. Kerensky's ambassador a credit of over three hundred millions.

Eventually this credit was reduced to a hundred and eighty-seven millions—and from the day that Kerensky ran away from Russia in November, 1917, until the day in February, 1921, when Mr. Hearst appealed to the courts to protect the public funds, this bogus ambassador spent the money belonging to you taxpayers like water.

Bahkmeteff arrived here as Kerensky's "ambassador" in July, 1917. Four months afterwards Kerensky was driven from Russia. A government which has no existence can have no diplomatic representatives. Therefore, Bahkmeteff's authority to represent Russia ceased in four months from his arrival in Washington.

Yet from that time to this he has kept up an extravagant "embassy" and retinue in Washington, has maintained luxurious headquarters in New York, has financed a costly propaganda bureau, has had his apologists and tools at work in the State Department, the Department of Justice, and the offices of magazines and newspapers, has lived and entertained in regal style, and has squandered in these extravagances and in propaganda activities and subsidies SIXTY MILLION DOLLARS OF YOUR MONEY SINCE THE WAR ENDED.

Moreover, the bonds of the former Russian government were sold in America to the amount of one hundred and fifty millions of dollars. In addition to that, one hundred and twenty-seven millions —exclusive of the sixty millions squandered as we have related— were paid out of the treasury upon Russian account.

These two hundred and seventy-seven million dollars were ostensibly spent for supplies to go to Russia—and the bulk of those supplies and goods NEVER SAW RUSSIA and NEVER LEFT THE UNITED STATES.

Millions of dollars worth of these goods—machinery, ships and materials of all sorts—were either rented, mortgaged or sold again by this fictitious "ambassador" of the non-existent Kerensky government. And this cheating and rascally procedure must have been well known to officials at Washington.

More than a year ago the Hearst newspapers revealed what was going on in this scandalous matter, and editorially pointed out the fact that it was not only the secret intrigues of Bahkmeteff, but probably also the fear of certain officials in the Department of State and the Department of Justice which was back of the plot to seize Mr. Martens upon a warrant of deportation, issued by the President at the urgency of Mr. Palmer, and ship him out of the country without trial or HEARING.

That warrant was issued, the agents of Mr. Palmer were watching to seize Mr. Martens, and the ship in which to hustle him out of the country was ready, when the editorial warning and a hasty subpoena issued by the Senate committee ended that effort to prevent investigations of the official relations and the scandalous expenditures of the fictitious "ambassador," Boris Bahkmeteff.

If the Senate will thoroughly investigate all that has occurred between officials of this administration—and we particularly recommend to notice the activities of a Mr. Hoover in Palmer's department, and of a Mr. Poole and a Mrs. Somers in the Bureau of Russian Affairs, in the State Department—it may find a mass of interesting information as to what was done with some part of the millions of public money handed over to the Bahkmeteff crew, and what has been done with some of the millions of dollars worth of goods and commodities which were supposed to have been bought and sent to Russia.

And do not forget that every dollar of these squandered hun- reds of millions must be paid by YOU TAXPAYERS—that every llar of public funds handed to this Russian spendthrift, adven- rer and political fraud, means that you people must pay that uch more in higher taxation and in higher cost of living. Your nt, your clothing, your food, must cost at least four hundred illion dollars more, because the administration lavished your oney upon this Russian crew of adventurers and spendthrifts.

Four hundred million dollars wasted on that crew.

And these same Wilson officials protest that the treasury cannot afford to take care of your sick, insane, disabled or unemployed soldiers. And others of them protest that the nation cannot afford to maintain a navy to defend itself from future perils.

And this huge sum you people who work and pay taxes must dig out of your earnings and savings to gratify the petty personal spite and offended vanity of Mr. Wilson.

That is the plain truth.

This alleged ambassador of a non-existent government is supplied with millions upon millions of dollars of the American people's money, which is apparently spent in trying to establish a government in Russia which the American people have no interest in, and is further spent in propaganda in the United States which tends to deceive the American people as to the actual conditions in Russia, which abuses and misrepresents the actual government of Russia and tends to bring about unnecessary ill-feeling between the people of Russia and the people of the United States, for no reason other than Mr. Wilson's personal favoritism.

Mr. Bahkmeteff is a private citizen of Russia. He is nothing else and has been nothing else for three years. And yet the government of the United States gives him millions upon millions of dollars as a private citizen to mislead the people of the United States, to plot against the people of Russia, and apparently for no reason except that Mr. Wilson's vanity was hurt by a telegram from Lenin implying that Mr. Wilson's opinion that Lenin was not fitted to be ruler of the people of Russia was as unimportant and negligible as Mr. Lenin's opinion that Mr. Wilson was not fitted to be the ruler of American people. It is possible that both gentlemen were correct in their opinions.

It is certain that one was.

More Truth Than Poetry

His Heavy Cross

By S. E. KISER

SHE took her jewel in the rough,
  And, strong with faith and pride,
She saw the better, finer stuff
  Beneath the coarse outside;
She cheered him when he needed cheer,
  She taught him to aspire;
She helped to make his pathway clear
  And mold his big desire;
From her he got his wish to earn
  The credit merit brings;
She taught him eagerly to turn
  From vulgar tastes to better things.

SHE polished with consummate art
  And with unflagging zeal,
And had such gladness in her heart
  As finer spirits feel;
She bore his children; lost the grace
  That grudging youth had granted;
The marks of care were on her face,
  Her weary shoulders slanted,
But ceaselessly she helped him still
  To reach the goal he sought,
Her strong faith undisturbed, until
  He passed the need of being taught.

SHE saw him rise above the crowd,
  And heard men speak his praise;
She watched his progress and was proud
  To see his polished ways.
A little figure, old before
  Her youth should have departed,
She marveled daily more and more,
  Recalling where he started,
And other people, thinking he
  Had grown beyond his wife,
Said: "How unfortunate to be
  So badly handicapped for life!"

Keeping Down to Expectations

"YOUR husband had a job with the Shipping Board, I believe. Did he notice anything wrong there?"

"No. He was an inspector and wasn't expected to notice things that were wrong."

BEAUTY'S ADVANTAGE

The best egg may not be inside the whitest shell, nor is the best bargain always to be found behind the most showy front, but the woman with a pretty face continues to inspire confidence.

AN OLD THEORY WORKS OUT

It appears that the raise in railroad fares has caused people to quit traveling, so that instead of being increased the revenues are shrinking. Clubbing the goose doesn't always cause her to lay more golden eggs.

Mr. B. Baer

A SHARK-EATING MAN

WALL STREET is staggering like an internal revenue agent. An innocent bystander horned in the other day, spread rumors that Yap was an island, pickled herrings were salty, and that whiskers were made of hair.

IMMEDIATELY, Amalgamated Needles fell off a point, Humpty-Dumpty Preferred took a tumble and M. T. and Out broke loose from its financial moorings.

WILTON LACKAYE'S latest success, "The Pit," was a play depicting the degradation and misery to which a fat bankroll can sink in the Street after the margin wolves use it for a teething ring.

BUT this time the turntable has put the engine off on the wrong track. Some suburban scientist gets the Nobel prize for oblonging the circle and unscrambling the omelet. Nobody knows who he is, but after he got through sprinkling rumors, six hundred brokers tried to walk upstairs on a moonbeam. They will be cutting out paper kewpies and making mud pies for quite some time.

A RUMOR in Wall Street is the yeast gossip. It is generally used in the daily roundup of the investor, who once roamed the Street in countless herds. But this time the rumor backfired and the boys were bitten by their own false teeth.

THE stranger led a small but select band of wilful men into the works and emerged stained with profits.

HE rumored his way in and rumored his way out, leaving a trail of devastation and horror that culminated in Z. Z. M. and A. G. W. I. being combined in a new company to be known hereafter as I. O. U.

THE Bradstreet and Dun seismograph was still trembling from the effect of Allan Ryan putting out that new Stutz car under the name of the Hesperus Six, when Little Brighteyes gave 'em another shock that will keep the brokers' rubber bands very loose on their bankrolls for some time.

NOBODY knows who he is. He told 'em everything but that. Like the guy at the organ, he knew not what he was playing, nor what he was doing there. But if he is caught, there is no doubt that the judge will punish him with the keys of the city and reprimand him with a compliment.

EFFORTS are being made to stop gambling in Chicago. Such efforts have been made every little while ever since Chicago succeeded in being mentioned on the map, but it should be remembered that Chicago is only about a hundred years old.

NO NEED TO BE TOO MODEST

It is generally pretty safe to tell people you know all about everything. Most of them will not know any better than to believe it.

Radiation Possibilities

By Edgar Lucien Larkin
Director of Mt. Lowe Observatory

THE very remarkable achievement just made by Physicist Albert A. Michaelson, the actual measuring of the diameter of the giant sun Betelguese by means of the physical phenomena involved in interference of waves of light, opens a vast field for exploration.

Interference fringes have long been known, and bands of darkness, absence of light, treated mathematically; but the application of these laws of nature to measuring the diameter of distant stars, all suns, is new. Waves of light are in length from the shortest violet, 63,000 to the inch, to the longest red, 33,000 to the inch. These constitute the ends of the visible spectrum, with all other colors between. But the visible waves are the least part of the spectrum, the invisible, the infra red and ultra violet radiations, extending out to many times the length of the visible.

The intense hope of new scientific discoveries is in the ultra-ultra-violet undulations. These are so short and rapid that imagination is submerged.

There may be waves shorter and shorter until waves as short as the Roentgen are reached. And there are intimations now that waves totally different from the ordinary Roentgen exist.

Dim laws, so far in outline, are apparently emerging from the mists of the unknown. If they become proved then all laws at present known will be mere little by-laws.

Suppose, for instance, that Michaelson's methods could be used in rapid waves, running down to lengths of millionths or billionths of an inch. Rays have been discovered that are more penetrating than the Roentgen. Every part of the living human body can be seen by means of these waves, and the blood in circulation in every minute vessel in the entire circulatory system.

But these waves must be modified by the peculiar process of fluorescence, where chemicals render invisible waves visible. Short rapid waves have been reflected into and out of diamonds. Sides of crystals in the diamond reflected them out, and the structure of diamonds within is now known. The entire structure of matter may be discovered by sending these obscure waves through them.

TELL 'EM SO

Too few are familiar with suitable words of commendation.

The person who does a certain piece of work in a satisfactory manner deserves a word of appreciation and a truthful discriminating word now and then helps to make work easier.

It is a mistake to praise something which is not worth it, for it is apt to make the person careless or indifferent.

Praise is worth nothing unless it is honest.

It is better to be truthful, though it hurt another's feelings, than to lie and say it is good and thereby hinder progress, which means better work.

Compliments should be given, but so should censure, where it is deserved.

The employer who does not say anything when the work displeases him, but retains the thought in his own mind of its inferiority, is doing an injustice to himself and the employe, whom he deceives into thinking he has given satisfaction.

Be honest with your men and be honest in your desire for just criticism, and there will be no backward moves.

Be a just critic and not a mere fault-finder.

Have You Any Songs From Ireland?

Editor Boston American.

Sir: Is it possible that any of your readers have any of the songs they are singing in Ireland today? I am told that the fight for freedom has called forth a number of new songs that are as inspiring as the "Battle Cry of Freedom" or the "Star Spangled Banner" were to the people of this great nation. Can't we see them in print?

and, taking his stand ju head, with all possible
and solemnity, he said:
George Washington and I have come to see you!"

I rolled over and grasped him by the hand and gave him a great, hearty, pump-handle shake, and said: "Why, George, I am delighted to see you! Come right in and make yourself at home!" And then, with a little closer scrutiny of his earnest face, I asked: "Have you crossed the Delaware yet?"

He did not know just what that meant, but though he made no reply, he seemed to take it under advisement, and the next day, when once more at the twilight hour, as I was stretched upon the bed for a few moments of relaxation before supper, he marched in and up to his place at my head, and again, with all dignity and solemnity he said: "I am George Washington and I have just crossed the Delaware!"

Well, the result of that was that there was a mighty tumble on the bed. With this parson prone upon his back and that small boy firmly seated in the saddle, I carried him for a ride. We not only crossed the Delaware together, but we also went on down to Baltimore, on this wise:

"Here we go to Baltimore!
Two behind and two before!
Igildy, pigildy, wiggildy, gouth,
O-u-t spells Out!"

Whereupon the horse would buck mightily and throw George Washington head over heels into the middle of the bed—accompanied by screams of laughter and handclappings of delight!

A Shave for Moses

Oh, the imagination of that small boy, and the potential merriment and recreation which he carries around constantly with him!

No, we do not spoil him, but we do have a world of fun over his quaint antics and his remarkable imagination. To instance another case, I asked one of the larger boys the other morning to bring me a pitcher of boiling water for shaving purposes—a very usual and regular occurrence in the household.

Well, this youngster, about whom I am telling you, had watched me shaving many times in something of awe, mixed with wonder, though he seemed to realize the necessity and utility of it, because whenever I kissed his rosy cheeks without a shave, there was an instant rebellion and rubbing of the spot, as he protested at the "stickers."

This particular morning, however, he only glanced at me, after the other brother had brought the water, but he had evidently looked also at the picture of Moses on the wall—Moses, by Michael Angelo, long bushy beard and all! So I was amazed a moment or two later to hear in the next room that well-known small voice saying to the boy who had brought me the water: "Jack, when Daddy gets through shaving, you go in there and get that pitcher of hot water. I have a flying machine, and I am going to take it up to Heaven so that Moses can shave!"

I replied: "You did! Well, tell me about it. Did your spade hit a Chinaman on the head and cut off his pigtail?"

And with all the solemnity, yet with the dawning of merriment in his dear, meaningful eyes, he answered: "Yes, Daddy, it did."

Whereupon, of course, there had to be a trip to China, and we made it in approved form and with wonderful expedition.
